Miss Butler, White as Paper, Tells Story of Alleged Attack by Three Negroes

Fainted Seven Times During Morning — Her Screams Rang Through Building

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 29.—Seated in a Morris chair, her face white as white paper, with sunken cheeks, Gertrude Butler began this morning the story of the robbery and assault of which she was the alleged victim and for which three Onset youths, Gomes, Dies and Andrews, are on trial.

Twice before she entered the courtroom, Miss Butler fainted, and five times after she had been placed on the stand. In her more composed moments the answers she gave to the questions of District Attorney Kenney were hardly audible and often had to be repeated for the benefit of the stenographer. Throughout her examination the girl was in tears. When she fainted it was necessary to carry her from the courtroom in her chair, and on one of these occasions her screams in the corridor outside rang through the building.

Progress under the circumstances was slow and when court adjourned

CINCINNATI, Nov. 29.—Four armed robbers early today raided the residence of William Cooper Proctor, president of the Proctor & Gamble Co., in Glendale, a suburb, forced the three women members of the household, who were alone in the house, to become prisoners in the cellar and then ransacked the home, escaping with jewelry, according to the police valued at more than $100,000.

The robbers escaped in an automobile.

Theatre Roof Collapsed; Many Killed

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(By the Associated Press)—The roof and one wall of the American theatre, under construction at Bedford and Park avenues, Brooklyn, collapsed this afternoon while about 50 men were at work in the orchestra pit.

SIX BODIES RECOVERED

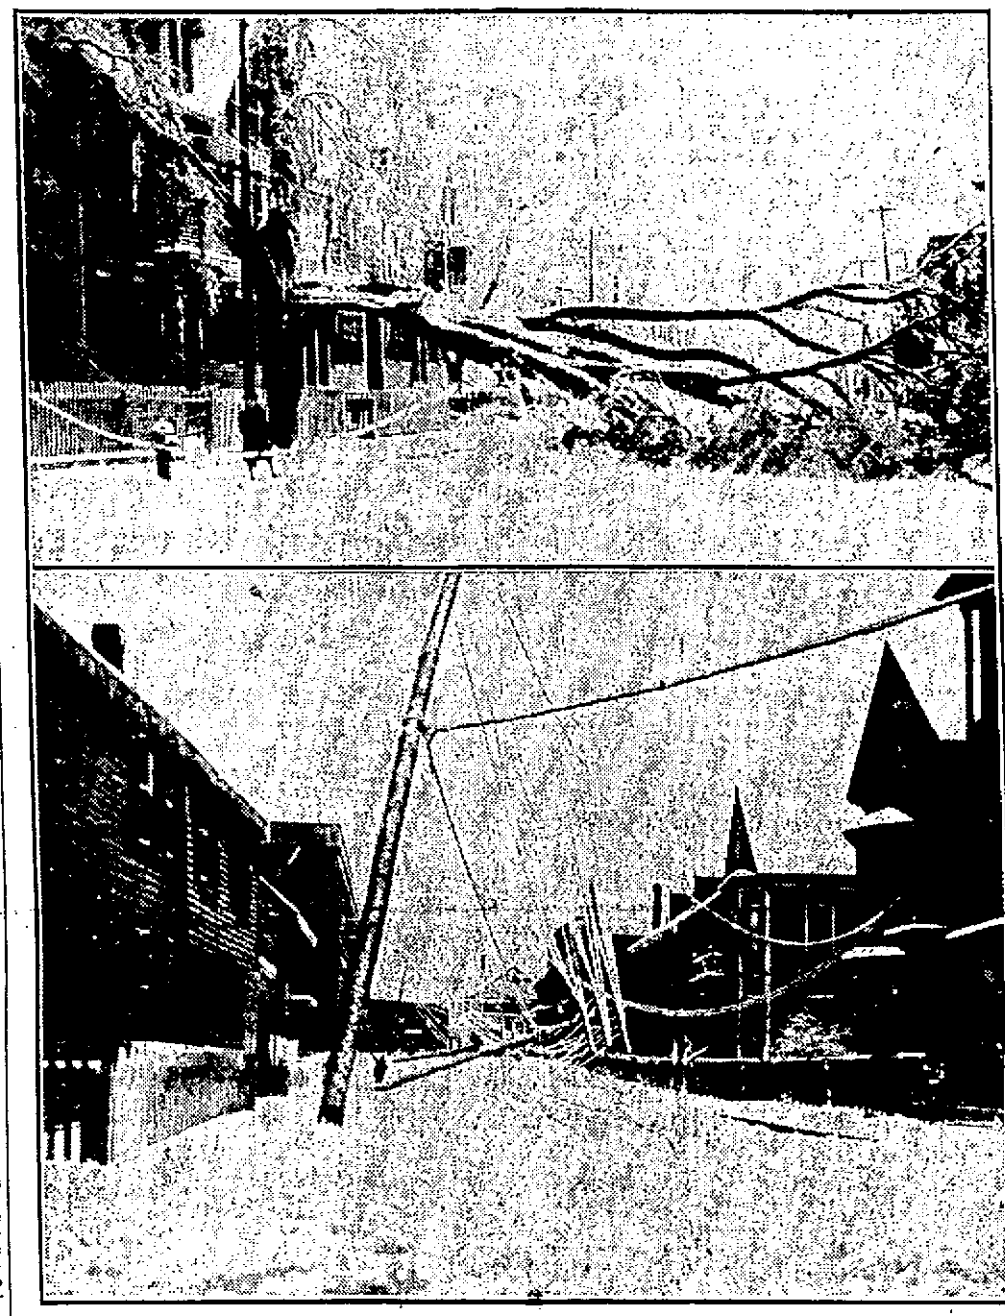

An hour later firemen had recovered six bodies and had sent about 20 persons to hospitals. The contractors were held on a technical charge of homicide.

RECOUNT MAKES LITTLE CHANGE

With six wards completed at an early hour this afternoon only slight changes were noted in the mayoralty recount. O'Sullivan gained 11, Brown gained 8, Thompson gained 3, Scott lost 10, Donovan gained 10, Mignault lost 15, Donnelly lost 13 and blanks lost 8, in the 18 precincts counted. A clerical error in one precinct lost ten votes for Mignault, and other slight slips kept the candidates seesawing as the precincts were counted.

Chairman McOsker stated that the commissioners are working hard to finish the count today, and it would be no fault of theirs if they were unsuccessful. He says "the worst is yet to come," referring to the recount for school committee.

Gigantic Task Ahead for Public Service Companies and Others

Gallantly struggling against heavy odds with every ounce of energy that ingenious humanity can muster to the rallying call of a sorely tried people, and with all the great public service corporations staggering under the most severe blows and heaviest burdens of one of the most destructive breakdowns ever known in this vicinity, with many homes, stores and meeting places still entirely cut off from lighting and telephone service and railway transportation still greatly hampered, Lowell is this afternoon renewing its valiant struggle with increased energy and more determination than ever to hit the high road back to normal conditions and put the Spindle City back on the map.

Conditions all over the city show no great improvement over those reported late last evening, although much headway is being made in some of the outlying sections of the city, where there is far better street car service and more power and telephone wires in a renewed condition. The havoc of the storm has, nevertheless, handicapped the service corporations because of its great duration, and the city of Lowell in many sections will be again without lights tonight, and there is no telling when the telephone wires will be working again in the outside districts.

All-Night Blockade

One of the worst disasters of the storm suffered by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company occurred late yesterday afternoon on Bridge street, Centralville, when two enormous limbs of a big elm tree

CITY COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING

Sum of $17,500 Appropriated for Use by Charity Department

Salmon Authorized to Spend $10,000 for Fire Apparatus

$5000 Appropriated to Piece Out City Hall Fund—$1000 for Elections

The appropriation of $17,500, $10,000 to be used for the assistance of mothers with dependent children and $7500 for charity outdoor relief, the sum of $5000 to piece out the city hall fund, and the sum of $1000 for the election appropriation for the current year, together with a vote to allow the fire department to purchase from the "Construction of Fire Engine House" fund a motor driven, triple combination fire engine, not to cost more than $10,000, featured the weekly meeting of the municipal council this morning.

In the absence of Mayor Thompson, who was out of town until this noon, Commissioner Marchand presided. Three petitions for garage licenses were read and Dec. 20 set for hearings on the petitions. The applications were made by Macien Chmielewski, 424 Lawrence street, A. H. Hammock, 1179 Lawrence street, and Frederick Strahle, 25 Arch street.

A hearing was scheduled on the petition of the Lowell Electric Light Corp. for a pole location in Chapel street, near Pollard, and as no remonstrants appeared the petition was referred to the commissioners of streets and water works and fire protection. A hearing on the petition of the N. E. T. & T. Co., for relocation of a pole in Mammoth road was treated in the same manner.

Joseph Kaplan was appointed a weigher of coal.

A petition was received, signed by Jacques Boisvert et al for a light in Delard street, and was referred to the commissioner of streets and highways and water works and fire protection.

The usual grist of orders for electric light and telephone poles and attachments, with favorable reports attached, were adopted.

The opening of Beaudry and Vincent streets, with the provision that the city ordinances be conformed to, was permitted by the council.

EX-SERVICE MEN TO ASSIST POLICE

Mayor Thompson this afternoon appointed 20 ex-service men to work in conjunction with the police, beginning tonight, patrolling streets of the city where "live" electric wires have fallen to the ground.

The mayor believes this precaution is necessary in view of the great danger that faces the public while so many wires have been broken by the storm and are still liable to fall. The men will be stationed at points where the wires are on the ground and will watch that no persons go in the dangerous vicinity.

Electric Light Customers

The unavoidable necessity of advising our customers that several sections of the territory and many homes we serve will be without electric light service possibly for several days or much longer is most deeply regretted.

Everything possible is being done to restore electric service.

All of our former EXPERIENCED line employees are volunteering their help and are already augmenting our regular crew.

Extreme courtesy has been shown us by the electric light companies at Lynn, Fall River, New Bedford and Brockton by permitting crews of their EXPERIENCED linemen voluntarily to come to Lowell during our great difficulty. Great credit is due these experienced linemen themselves for voluntarily leaving their own work to come to help us during these severe conditions.

At noon today weather conditions continue fully as unfavorable.

So far all that can be done is to clear wires and poles broken down by falling trees. This will continue until completed and until pleasant weather returns.

Our regular line employees and other regular employees assigned to this work are absolutely loyal, unsparing of comfort and energy, and are doing most commendable work during long hours daily.

You are earnestly requested to appreciate the severe conditions existing.

We express sincere appreciation of and thanks for the helpful kindness evidenced by many Lowell business organizations who have offered assistance, also to so many of our customers who invariably have been sympathetic when reporting their inconvenience to this office.

By JAMES W. DEAN

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—There is a slump in the movie industry. Many within the industry thought that it would end with the passing of summer. The past summer was the worst season the business has known.

Business has picked up some since amusement parks and outdoor attractions have been closed, but it is not yet up to the standard of previous autumns and winters.

Movie houses in all parts of the country are closing.

This condition results from high admission prices to motion picture theatres, that and nothing else.

When the admission price is lowered more people will attend the picture theatres. The total receipts will be higher. The industry will be more prosperous.

There is evidence aplenty that too much is being charged for admission to movies. In some places in the southwest patrons of theaters are given charge accounts. They go to see a movie and pay when they get the money.

Business slumped at a $300,000 theater in Brooklyn. The manager brought the price down to ten cents. Then he charged one cent for the second admission. In other words, two for eleven cents.

Why are movie admissions high? Exhibitors are little to blame. Many of them are conducting business at a loss.

The main factor in keeping movie admissions at the present level is the high salaries being paid to stars. In some cases rentals of films are not in proportion to the cost of production.

This writer has information at first hand that one film actor who has been featured in only a few films and received $500 a week for one of his recent pictures, asked five times that amount for his next picture.

Much of the blame for high rentals of pictures also rests upon the shoulders of the producers and distributors. Some of the foreign films prove that. They were bought for a song, comparing their cost to the cost of pictures made in this country.

Were rentals for those pictures lowered? Were admission prices to see them lowered? Not by a jug full!

In some cases the prices to see foreign films were advanced beyond the usual admission prices!

The day of the nickelodeon and the ten-cent picture undoubtedly is past. The public demands better pictures than can profitably be shown at those prices!

However, pictures are not five to ten times better than they were when admissions were one-tenth to one-fifth of what they now are.

The motion picture industry will continue to be in a chaotic state until it is run on the same basis as other industries, a certain percentage of profit on the capital invested with a sane scale of salaries to players who make the pictures.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

At B. F. Keith's theatre this week, two of vaudeville's most versatile entertainers, J. Francis Dooley and Corinne Sayles, former stars of "Monte Cristo, Jr.," hold the star position on the bill, and their spontaneous comedy, witty dialog and eccentric and clever dancing aroused the audiences at both performances yesterday, to enthusiasm and uncontrollable laughter. This renowned team has not visited Lowell for several seasons and has returned with one of the most amusing skits seen in a local theatre for many a day.

Mr. Dooley not only performed many stunts, both unusual and mirth-provoking, but starred as an orator, telling his audiences of previous visits to Lowell in the old days when musical extravaganza first became the rage. Miss Sayles was not only pleasing to the eye but proved an excellent dancer and singer, and held up her end of the rapid-fire repartee in a most capable manner. The audiences were compelled to exercise their wits to the utmost to grasp the extemporaneous quirks injected by this skilful pair.

Sonia Baraban and Charles C. Grohs, featuring "Aztec Indian Love," are two of the best interpretative dancers ever seen here. Opening with a Chinese scene, with excellent costuming and symbolic dancing, the pair shift quickly to a modern melange of fancy dancing, appropriately costumed. "Aztec Indian Love," with both artists attired in the ancient costume of the famous Indian race, was featured by an Apache dance with Miss Baraban and Mr. Grohs presenting an artistic conception of this barbaric ceremony.

Raymond Bond, as an embryo salesman of women's wear, and Miss Eleanor Magnuson, as a sophisticated buyer in a New York department store, present a quaint and heart-intriguing comedy skit. The extraordinary efforts of the unskilled but determined salesman to beat down the flinty reserve of the buyer not only wins the sympathy of the audience, but interests it in his cause to an unusual degree, and the buyer's final capitulation pleases it immensely. Miss Magnuson and Mr. Bond act their respective parts excellently, and deserve the applause which greets their efforts.

The Bowman brothers, the "Blue Grass boys," are black-face comedians of the best type, and their songs and repartee are well received. Peggy Carhart, concert violinist, formerly with the Cleveland Symphony orchestra, plays her instrument exquisitely and made an excellent impression yesterday. Daley, Mac and Daley have a spectacular roller-skating act hard to equal, with excellent comedy interwoven. Nestor and Vincent offer a unique balancing act, introducing many novelties.

A travelog on "Rio Janiero," Topics of the Day, and a modernized Aesop's fable open the bill, and the Pathe News weekly, showing scenes in the United States and England, is the closing number.

THE STRAND THEATRE

It is seldom that Mary Pickford and her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, appear on the same bill at the same theatre, but this is what is happening at the Strand theatre the first three days of the week. Mary is being featured in a delightful melodrama entitled "Through the Back Door," while Fairbanks holds the title role in a very pleasing comedy, "The Nut."

Mary is charming in the part of Jeanne, the daughter of a rich American woman, who is being reared by the wife of a Belgian farmer. Jeanne is brought up on the farm and is contented with her surroundings. She grows into womanhood and is made to believe that she is really the daughter of the peasant woman. When the war breaks out, she is given a passport and is sent to America to her real mother, but despite her efforts she is unable to convey the glad news of her arrival to the one who loves her and who has given her up for dead. Finally, she secures employment at the home of her mother as a maid and later the happy reunion occurs. The play is one of the best produced by Mary in a long time.

In "The Nut," Fairbanks is given another opportunity to show his skill as an athlete, for while impersonating a young man with inventive ideas, whose sole object is to win the admiration of the girl he loves, he goes through a series of stunts that are amazing. The romance in the play is splendidly disposed of and the happy ending is brought about very logically when the young man rescues the girl from a gambling den to which she has been lured by the villain.

The weekly comedy is good and the current events, which include the Harvard-Yale football game and other interesting scenes in various parts of the world, are very pleasing. The musical numbers are also enjoyable.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

For real human interest, pathos and an example of mother love, the picture, "Over the Hill," featuring Mary Carr, now playing at the Merrimack Square theatre, is wonderfully complete. It is doubtful if ever a picture carried a more lifelike reproduction of the trials and tribulations a mother will endure for her children than the picture which last night started a seven days' run.

Mary Carr is depicted as the mother of six children, who, save one, her son, John, forget the simple teachings of the bible, especially the fourth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother." Miss Carr is the whole show and dominates every scene from the beginning to the end. Supporting her is John Walker, cast as her son, Johnny.

The prelude to the story shows Miss Carr as Ma Benton raising a family of four boys and two girls under the handicap of a good-for-nothing husband, who overestimates the value of his manual services and in consequence refuses to work.

A scene showing three of the boys, Isaac, Charley and Johnny at school is very realistic. Charley draws a cartoon of the teacher on the blackboard and blames it on to Johnny. As a forerunner of what is to come, Johnny takes all blame and also the whipping that goes with it. His childhood sweetheart meets him at the door of the school and comforts him, again showing what is to come.

Here the prelude ends and after a lapse of several years the children have all grown up, married and left the old home. Johnny again proves the exception and stays at home to aid his mother. Reunions are held in which a widening breach is made between Johnny and his now hypocritical brother, Isaac.

Johnny, too, decides to leave but the night before his departure he catches his father in the act of stealing horses. He saves his father, takes the blame and is sent to prison for three years. While Johnny is in jail the father dies of a broken heart and the mother, left alone in the little town of Fairfield, Conn., waits for him. He comes back from prison and determines to start west to make his fortune. Before going he makes his brother Isaac promise to care for their mother. He sends money from time to time for her care but Isaac appropriates the money for his own use. The poor mother, buffeted from one child's home to the other, is forced to go to the poor house.

To surprise his mother Johnny returns from Oregon on Mothers' Day, severely beats his brother, Isaac, and drags him nearly to the poor house where the mother is found, now a withered old lady, on her hands and knees scrubbing floors for her keep.

Johnny brings the mother home to a surprise, for his sweetheart has fixed her old home up for her again. The children, humble and ashamed, return for forgiveness and like a mother she forgives all.

The play is staged under the direction of Harry Millarde and produced from Will Carleton's famous poem. The settings are ideal and show much originality in construction.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

The ravages of the storm king which held the city in its grip all day yesterday and departed leaving a trail of snow and ice-covered streets and traffic blockades in its wake did not prevent the patrons of the Lowell Opera House from flocking to that popular playhouse last evening for the first presentation in this city of the highly dramatic and gripping melodrama, "Why Girls Leave Home." The theatre on Gorham street was crowded, and wonderful as it may seem to those not able to be present and see the splendid performance, practically every seat was filled before the curtain arose at 8.15. It was an admirable performance in every way, the story revealed was one of the most unusual ever offered by the Lowell Players for the edification of patrons, old and new, and the cast most congenial and well chosen from "leads" to "supers," was entirely capable.

This realistic drama of life today has five acts, each staged in the usual Opera House manner with splendid attention to minute details. The story is unusual, the various roles requiring deep study and preparation, and the opening performance last night was well worth going to see.

The tale is one that throbs with interest from start to finish. Miss Shirley Magrath, as Pearl Sherwood, in the lead, proved once again her admirable talent. Her work reached high perfection in the tragical scenes and the role is one that must tax any actress who aims as high as this popular Lowell favorite. Kalman Matus, as Samuel Stone, Pearl's faithful lover, had a difficult role, although he has had far better ones in some other plays. His performance, nevertheless, was smooth and captivating, as it always is. He made the ideal lover whose faith in the girl he loved never wavered.

The story unfolded shows the luring of a country girl to the city, where she is duped and led to drinking dens by clever accomplices, male and female. Warned that the fashionable young city man was not sincere, the country maid, beautiful, innocent and high-strung, wanted to live her own life. Her innocence brought her into peculiar situations, which aroused her devoted relatives, including a loving brother who, although addicted to drink, attempted to protect her. Finding the girl in the city after a long search, the brother attempted to induce the girl to return home. There was a quarrel, and the girl defied him. The brother declared, in the frenzy of the moment, that he would kill the girl before he would allow her to return to the snare set for her by evil companions, and in a battle royal between brother and sister, the former struck the girl down with a pair of fireside tongs. Believing that he had killed her, he declared he was ready to die. The police were not notified of the supposed tragedy until the girl, who had not been slain, had been spirited away by a girl from the tenderloin who loved the girl's brother and who had been discarded. Kept in a prison-like room unknown to the police, who received reports of an actual murder, the girl was a prisoner for six months. In the meantime, her brother was tried for murder and sentenced to hang. The girl's final escape from the clutches of her captors, her appearance at the prison just as her brother was about to be led to the gallows, was one of the most thrilling episodes unfolded by the players.

Besides the notable work of the "leads," Mr. Matus and Miss Magrath, Clarence Chase, as Johnny Hobbins, gave a splendid performance in the role of the youth in love but slightly afraid of getting into trouble until his nerve returned and made him thrash the villain for a fare-thee-well. Miss Marion Coogan as Minnie Sherwood, gave her usual finished performance; Miss Ollie Minell was splendidly cast in the mother's role of Mrs. Sherwood; Richard Castilla as Joseph White, also proved once more his value as a stock company artist of high rank. One of the strongest characters and one that was taken in a most convincing manner was that of Dan Sherwood, with Seth Arnold in the role. Arnold's work last evening was one of the strongest "cards" in the deck of stock characters. Nothing like it has been seen at the Opera House before for some time. Jay Strong appeared as George Hedge, James L. Wood was well placed as Kelly, Miss Mabel Griffith gave her usual fine performance as Dolly Fletcher of the tenderloin. Miss Griffith's work is growing in popularity right along. She made an attractive figure last evening in several thrilling scenes and showed excellent taste in dressing for the role. John Ravold appeared as Mr. Tiddler in a short appearance but one that gave him a good opportunity to display his varied talents; Frank Joyce had the role of Boab and Hal Stack, as captain of police, gave one of the best performances he has ever furnished. A clever role and refreshing in every way was that of Sadie Dillock, taken by Miss Coralinn Hazard, whose work was very pleasing. The singing and dancing of the Reilly sisters in the cabaret scene was a novel feature.

RIALTO THEATRE

Merit attaches to the whole production of "Playthings of Destiny," the Associated First National pictures attraction which opened a three day engagement at the Rialto theatre yesterday afternoon. Seldom has such a dramatic story been told so skilfully on the screen and rarely has the author hit upon a series of instances so certain to hold the interest of an audience right up to the very end.

Anita Stewart is the leading star in this production and in the characterization of a backwoods school teacher who become the wife of two noted English diplomats, she adds one more to her list of dramatic successes. An equally good cast supports Miss Stewart and succeed in rounding out a well balanced and attractive screen production.

On the same program at the Rialto, for the first three days of the week, is Blanche McGarity in a strong production, "Love's Redemption." Also an Education comedy and the Kinograms.

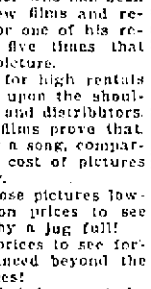

The story of "Playthings of Destiny" opens in the Canadian backwoods, where a school teacher, "Julie Laneau," becomes the bride of Geoffrey Arnold after a short acquaintance. Her happiness is rudely shattered one day, by the arrival of a woman who claimed to be Geoffrey's wife, and broken by the thought that her husband had deceived her, she leaves home in a terrible blizzard and becomes lost to her husband and the searching party who sought her everywhere.

In her new sphere Julie is thrown into the acquaintance of "Herbert Randolph," who is snowbound in a north woods cabin while on a diplomatic mission for his English government. She accepts the generosity of his hospitable home and, in time, accepts his proposal of marriage, believing that her former marriage to Arnold is void. They leave the north for Jamaica, where her new husband is sent on another diplomatic mission and, in his ambition to become governor general of Jamaica, he invites one "Lord Stanhope" to his home. Stanhope proves to be none other than Julie's first husband. A series of explanations follow and in a fitting climax, Julie and her baby boy are returned to the first husband and father.

"Love's Redemption," the second feature of the Rialto program, is the production which presents the prize winner of the "Fame and Fortune" contest. Miss Blanche McGarity, who is the winner, is presented in the leading role, being chosen from a list of approximately fifty thousand American beauties. The story is one that carries a wide appeal, depicting her as the daughter of a confirmed criminal who desired that she follow his profession. How she finally succeeds in living the straight and narrow path and how she changes the character of her father is a story woven delightfully into the screen.

The other attractions of the Rialto are well up to the usual standard.

ANY PORT LOOKED GOOD, STATES Q-M

HAD SUFFERED TEN YEARS FROM DYSPEPSIA AND THOUGHT HE HAD HEART TROUBLE

"By the help of Tanlac I have overcome a case of stomach trouble of ten years' standing," was the emphatic statement made, recently, by Frank P. Powers, 286 South Main street, Providence, quartermaster on boats of the Colonial Steamship Co., plying between Providence and New York.

"I could not eat anything without being in misery for hours afterwards. There were burning pains in the pit of my stomach that couldn't have been much worse if I had swallowed live coals of fire. This indigestion would wind me so that I couldn't climb a flight of stairs or walk a little ways without stopping to rest and get my breath. I also had such bad pains around my heart that I became alarmed thinking I had heart trouble. I had no appetite and was fast falling away to a skeleton. I was so thin that my clothes just hung on me like a sack, and I don't think I had a single good night's sleep in ten years. I did well to sleep two hours without waking up.

"Although I spent a large part of what I made for treatment and medicines my condition kept getting worse until I began taking Tanlac. The way this medicine has brought me out of my troubles and built me up seems almost miraculous. I bought Tanlac without having much faith in it, but it was a case of 'any port in time of storm,' and the medicine has certainly saved me from the worst. I eat just anything now, never feel a sign of indigestion and have gained fourteen pounds. My health is fine and I can't help praising Tanlac."

CLEARING THE STREETS

Mayor Thompson Sends Letter to the Commissioner of Highways

Realizing the deplorable condition of the streets as a result of the storm, Mayor Perry D. Thompson sent the following letter to the commissioner of streets and highways this morning:

Nov. 29, 1921.

Dennis A. Murphy, Commissioner Department of Streets and Highways, City Hall, Lowell, Mass.

My Dear Commissioner:

A situation almost unparalleled in the history of the city has arisen on account of the terrific storm of the past few days.

In this connection and in view of the fact that many of our citizens are at present out of employment, it would seem to me that the city government should stand ready to stretch a point if necessary in the matter of expenditures of money for labor and care for as many of these men as possible.

Therefore, I urge you, that during this emergency and the great amount of cleaning-up that will be necessary, you take on as many extra men as possible.

I shall be very glad to suggest and place in motion before the municipal council any order which may assist your department financially in this matter.

Very truly yours,
PERRY D. THOMPSON,
Mayor of Lowell.

Storm Causes Three Deaths

in northern sections had let up, but sleet or rain were falling in the southern tier of states and in some parts of southern New Hampshire and Vermont. The temperature, a few degrees below freezing, caused the rain to congeal on trees and wires, which were still falling today, adding to the confusion of crippled telephone, telegraph, lighting and street railway service.

Three Deaths Recorded

The storm was responsible for three deaths. Clarence G. Coburn, a grocer of Lowell, who was fatally injured when he was struck by a falling limb, died at a hospital. Two persons were electrocuted in Rhode Island when they came in contact with dangling wires.

Mills and factories depending upon electric power for operation were closed in many cases; homes in two score of cities and towns were without electric lights; telephone toll service was demoralized and many lines cut off; trolley lines were out of commission in suburbs and running with difficulty in some cities, and railroad trains were running slightly behind schedule.

Serious Conditions Off Shore

Camden Man's Amazing Message to Rheumatics

After Suffering Intense Agony for Many Years—He Wants to Tell Others.

Dr. Brigadell: I simply had to write and tell you what your wonderful Camphorole has done for me. For many years I suffered the tortures of Rheumatism as only those who have it know. At the same time I had a terrible itch and, covered with sores, the sharp pains were so severe, I could not sleep. Had to get up to rub and scratch. It almost drove me crazy. I tried doctor after doctor and all kinds of medicine I was told to take, which only left me worse. I could not bend my knees. I am a steamfitter by trade and had to give up my work. Seeing your advertisement in a paper, I thought, I would take another chance and told my daughter to get me a package of Camphorole. You can imagine my surprise after using Camphorole, I started to get better right away. After using two jars of Camphorole I am well and happy and have gone back to work. I shall never forget the day I took a chance on Camphorole. After all the years I suffered, it feels so good to be well again. Robert W. Teesdale, 1917 High St., Camden, N. J.

Lights and Phones Cut

near the corner of Eighth street and Bridge, smashed down clear across the Centralville thoroughfare, carrying down live wires and numerous telephone lines and covering the street and sidewalk with debris. All traffic on the Dracut line was stopped and the streets were promptly roped off and red lanterns placed at either end of the blockade to warn traffic and pedestrians.

It was the hardest job the local street railway trouble-fixers have tackled thus far since the storm began. The live wires lay in a tangled mass on Bridge street for a distance of nearly 2000 feet, and police, linemen and street railway "specials" had their hands full all night keeping autoists from entering the danger zone. Pedestrians were prevented from crossing the street by volunteer guards, some of whom remained on post for several hours at a time. Storekeepers issued warnings to customers, and all pedestrians were warned at both ends of the breakdown to be careful in crossing the street and watch the overhead wires, which sagged dangerously near the ground.

The work required to remove the broken tree branches was enormous. Linemen with axes and saws worked from 6 o'clock until nearly midnight before branches were down and dragged away to be piled up on the nearest sidewalks. In the meantime, the live wires were completely meshed in broken branches in four different instances, and the linemen had one of the most dangerous jobs in the history of repair work in Lowell, according to the company officials.

About 9 o'clock, one of the big repair trucks of the Eastern lines, which had been busy in Belvidere, managed to get through the snowdrift and slush running on low speed, and came to the aid of the wiremen who were on the job but were handicapped by small numbers. The extra crew began the job of removing the broken wires and putting in new ones, and it was the worst kind of a task with the poor lights provided. Much of the work was done in absolute darkness, the men working without gloves and in slush and water over their ankle tops. It was one of the finest performances Lowell citizens living in Centralville ever saw, and the men were finely treated by many residents and storekeepers, who sent relays of hot coffee and sandwiches to the workmen during the night. Centralville is pluckily fighting through today, and although without electric light service as far as Christian Hill, which was in total darkness last night, few can be found who have any intention of joining the Kickers' club.

The Eastern company's wire gang of experts who accomplished the live wire repairs and finished the job this morning just before daylight included John Wisted, Stephen Gilfoy, William Rourke, Edward Marcotte, Timothy Hogan, John Warren and Kitson E. Leroy.

Live Wire Danger

Joseph Vaughan, a young man employed as a delivery clerk at the John P. Curley market in John street, had a narrow escape from being electrocuted last evening when a live trolley wire wound around the axle of his truck, charging the machine with a current of several hundred volts. The young man today attributes his safety to the fact that he wore rubber boots. Vaughan was driving his truck through East Merrimack street at about 7.30 o'clock when suddenly his machine became stalled. In order to get a start to climb the hill the machine was backed several feet and one of the rear wheels struck a live wire, which was lying on the ground. The wire wound around the axle of the car, charging every steel part of the machine and in a few seconds sparks and flashes enveloped the auto. Vaughan brought his machine to a stop and crept out of the car without laying his hands on any part of it. Later the office of the electric car company was notified and skilled men were sent to the scene. In a short time the live wire was removed from the truck and Vaughan was able to proceed along as no damage had been done the car.

Narrow Escapes

Many hair-breadth escapes from accidents that might have been very serious are being reported. People from all districts tell one another of their narrow escapes. Today, for example, a driver of a team left his vehicle standing under a tree. A limb came crashing down and only that the horse instinctively shied would have landed on the horse's head. In Centralville this morning a man was saved from being electrocuted by a warning given just as the man who about to step on a live wire. A machine without chains while stopping, skidded and just missed bumping a horse and team in Merrimack street. The most dangerous spot in the city seems to be the junction of High and East Merrimack streets. A limb of a tree is on the wires and a telegraph pole is also leaning on them.

Telegraph Poles Down

There is a complete wreckage of poles along railroad tracks. From North Chelmsford to the Country club no less than thirty poles were broken off at the base. Fortunately they did not fall across the tracks, but in many places the tracks were obstructed by telegraph poles that fell under the weight of ice on the wires.

Along High Street

There is a great wreckage of trees on High street. In some places the sidewalks are completely blocked by trees bent to the ground and heavy boughs broken off. One tree in front of the Polish church lot shows a stump in the centre with half a dozen large boughs broken off and lying on the ground. Sherman street was impassable as the trees bending from either side toward the centre made a double arch completely blocking traffic. The same is true of Porter and Oak streets and lower Andover street from High to Nesmith was a mass of wreckage.

Fort Hill Park

Scores of the young maple trees set out by the park department during the past two years have been broken off and others have been bent to the ground so that they can never be straightened. The wreckage on Fort Hill park is deplorable, many of the most beautiful trees having succumbed to the weight of ice while the shrubbery is also very generally damaged.

Park Department

Seven gangs of men numbering some 50 individuals were put to work clearing away debris in many sections of the city this morning. Some of the hardest jobs to deal with were reported on Arlington street, Andover street, Fort Hill avenue and the Highlands. Central streets were looked after first, but many important traffic roads leading out of the city had to be dealt with also without delay. The work was carried on with the aid of a large truck, two single and two double pungs. Men with axes were compelled to chop away many trees and branches and throw them on the sidewalks in order to clear the way for road traffic and street cars.

The worst job for the park employes was the removal of a large tree at the corner of East Merrimack and High streets. The trunk was some 40 feet long and lay across power and light wires, and also interfered with the telephone system out that way. The work took more than two hours, and much of the debris still remains to be cleared away.

Street Department

More than 350 men were out early this morning for the street department, the call for help receiving a quick response from men without employment. Supt. Bowers sent the men out in relays, and finally got together 40 dump carts in the morning. A great deal of snow was removed from street corners and main streets. This afternoon a number of big pungs were added to the equipment. Many tree limbs had to be carted away before blockades could be lifted.

Commissioner Murphy told The Sun at noon that the department would have to spend at least $10,000 before conditions were normal. He said he did not see how the big job could be done without at least that outlay of money, and probably more might be needed. Never in his experience, he said, has he been up against anything like it. There isn't a chance of getting the streets cleared up in the central sections of the city for several days yet and it will be many weeks he said, before the debris now covering the whole city and the big parks can be removed.

More than a hundred streets in the city limits are blockaded by trees and wires at the present time. More blockades were reported to the "super" this morning.

Commissioner Murphy reported severe damage to many valuable trees on his estate at 70 Rolfe street this morning. Two handsome magnolia trees have been destroyed by snow and ice loads, and three large locust trees will have to be cut down and removed, as the branches are destroyed.

The street has been in an impassable condition for two days. Large maples and elms on Rolfe street have been destroyed and limbs strew the thoroughfare from end to end. Many wires are down in that section, too. Service to the commissioner's home was broken.

Street Railways

Although badly up against it, the street railways are making good headway in opening up lines that were closed tight yesterday. The number of wires down in every section of the suburbs, however, is hampering the recovery of traffic.

Christian Hill is off the map completely, and nothing can be done to relieve that territory until late this afternoon or tonight. Workmen were clearing the tracks on the hill route this morning, and more than fifty large tree branches had to be cut up and tossed on to the sidewalks. The wires were in bad shape, many of them being torn down and sagging over the streets in dangerous fashion.

General Manager Thomas Lees of the Eastern lines, gave The Sun a detailed description of the damage done and this morning's situation. The North Chelmsford car line was finally opened and cars are running as far as Stevens corner.

The service to Chelmsford Centre has been restored. Out Billerica way, there is double track service as far as Edson cemetery, and beyond the road has to use one track, the other being blocked completely by trees and broken limbs. The picture of the desolation in that territory beyond the cemetery is pathetic, Manager Lees said. Linemen have been tackling jobs where traffic must be maintained before "side lines" are restored, but the service in most sections was getting better every hour.

In Billerica, the situation is actually desperate, with no prospects of through service to Boston for some time. The damage in Collinsville, on the Lakeview line, was heavy, but the linemen are getting out that way this afternoon, with prospects of car service to the end of the line due before tomorrow morning.

The High street and the Dracut Centre lines are open.

Public Trustee Fred J. Crowley of Boston is in town today and assisting Manager Lees in looking after all troubles.

About 150 men are out shoveling snow from the car line areas, and extra men have gone to the repair shops. Many Eastern men from other cities arrived this morning to help clear out the Lowell lines. A gang came in by truck this morning from Taunton, arriving at 8 o'clock. Eight men were in the party, and they responded promptly to Manager Lees' "S.O.S." call.

Quincy sent a batch of men over the road, eight in all, and they got here in time to get some of the spare tools. Boston headquarters got in touch with Mr. Lees by telephone, and telegraph about 9 o'clock. They offered to send the linemen anything they needed in the way of clothing, food and make arrangements for shelter. Mr. Lees at once arranged accommodations at a local hotel where the men will be kept until their work is complete. Meal checks were issued to all workmen this morning.

The Boston & Lowell division is blocked. Reading being the place where the blockade is still in force. Many Lowell workmen are down there unbanking the broken wires and clearing away debris. The Lowell-Lawrence line is O.K.

The Telephone Service

Manager Leathers announced at noon that the telephone lines were still in bad shape, with but little improvement shown in the outlying sections, although extra men have been working day and night to restore some sort of service. The situation is very bad indeed in the suburbs, and no prediction can be made as to when service will be back in some decent shape.

Between 4000 and 5000 telephones are out of commission today in Lowell and vicinity. The lines north to Manchester and Concord, N. H., are out of commission, and the lines west to Worcester, Springfield and Fitchburg, are down. The service to Portland is badly interrupted. The eastern lines are working O.K. and the Boston wires are in good shape.

The telephone company officials stated this noon that the first work at hand is putting the streets in safe condition for traffic, so many wires being down that repair work and restoration of phone service cannot go along until the tangles are straightened out and the wires put back into the poles.

The service out Pawtucketville way is good as far as Sixth avenue, and out Varnum avenue way to the Lowell General hospital. South Lowell is also in O.K. condition this morning. Some sections of Belvidere are down and out.

Electric Light Service

Manager Hunnewell of the Lowell Electric Light Corp. reported but little progress in the restoration of power and light wires this morning, although current was being sent to some of the big mills outside the city. The residential sections cannot expect phone service for several days. The situation is a desperate one, Mr. Hunnewell said. Extra gangs of men are at work today endeavoring to get lights to the hospitals of the city, and the work in relieving the situation in public buildings is going on rapidly.

All power and light wires are "out" on Christian Hill, Belvidere, the Highlands, Pawtucketville and Centralville. Nothing can be done for many days to get back the service in Westford, Billerica, Chelmsford, Tewksbury and Dracut. Word came in at 10 o'clock that the service out Gorham street way and around the city hall area was back in good shape.

The street lights cannot be restored for some time, but the ornamental lights, 300 or more, which ordinarily go out at 11.30 each night, will be kept lighted all night until further notice.

Thirty-five wire experts are here today, sent on emergency calls from Fall River, New Bedford, Lynn and Brockton. One truck with 10 men came in from Fall River at 4 o'clock this morning. The New Bedford crew rode in on the milk train, and from Lynn came a truck with a big squad of "extras," reaching here at 2 o'clock this morning. Brockton's crew of experts was due to arrive at 3 o'clock this afternoon. All are the very best men in the service, and all volunteered to come here, company officials said.

At 7.30 this morning, 40 men, armed with wire tools, scattered all over the city looking for trouble. Before 8 o'clock Manager Hunnewell received word from 10 former employes, now working in local banks, stores and offices, that they were coming in to help out "the boys." They arrived soon afterward, and every man had his "hooks," working clothes, life belts and hand tools. Hunnewell greeted them with a handshake and they left the office for a snowball fight of three minutes in front of the offices while the girls in the building ran to the windows and cheered the "huskies."

This afternoon the lighting corporation issued a public announcement, the first of its kind it ever had to put out before. It was explained that all former experienced employes are volunteering for help and greatly augmenting the regular crews. Extreme courtesy has been shown by out of town lighting companies in sending extra men here. The company in its "ad" gives full credit to the pluck of the men who are fighting the worst breakdowns in the history of local wire service.

Weather conditions continued unfavorable this afternoon, but the company hopes to restore service in some sections that greatly need power and lights.

Work in mills outside of Lowell that was stopped yesterday by lack of power, was resumed this morning with the lines in good condition.

"Service?" said Mr. Hunnewell. "It may be several days and it may be two or three weeks before we can clean up the damage and restore power and light. It is the worst ever. If the storm abates or we get a good warm rain, our troubles would soon be over."

Linemen are at work on the pumping station circuit this afternoon, and three-ton trucks and several horses and sleds have been sent out that way with food and wire supplies.

Warnings were issued this morning by the lighting company that all persons should keep away from districts where power lines are down, whether or not the wires appear to be "alive." Attention to this warning will help in preventing accidents. The company workmen have been handling dangerous wires just as fast as the alarms come in and cannot always be on the spot when each wire falls.

Harry's Narrow Escape

Harry S. Drury of Hanks street had a narrow escape from injury last night when shortly after having parked his automobile outside his home a large tree was felled by the storm, dropping across his machine. As he heard the crash Mr. Drury rushed out to see the tree stretched across the street and over his car. In order to extricate the auto he had to summon a truck from the Church street garage. Although the auto was badly damaged Harry considers himself fortunate at having escaped injury, for had the tree fallen a few minutes before he would have been in the car.

Plymouth street in Pawtucketville, was hard hit by the storm, and perhaps more so than any other street in the city. The residents of that street are without telephone service and without electric lights, for the four poles in the street, which carried both currents, were snapped at their base yesterday. The poles fell in the street and with the exception of carrying with them the telephone and light wires, did not cause any other damage. Two other poles of the Lowell Electric Light Corp. in Hall street, between Coolidge and Aiken streets, were broken late yesterday afternoon, and as a result, the stores of that district were forced to use candles last evening.

The North Common

Numerous families residing in the vicinity of the North common, were made happy by the storm yesterday, for the breaking of limbs on the park has afforded them the opportunity of getting a supply of fuel for the winter at no expense. It is said that the broken limbs and felled trees on the common represented several hundred cords of good wood and today there is very little indication of the disaster on the common, inasmuch as the broken limbs and other pieces of wood have been removed. Men, women and children were seen on the common up to a late hour, last evening, removing the wood to their cellars, some using their arms as a means of transportation, while others made use of sleds, wheelbarrows and even go-carts. The cleaning of the park by these people in need will be a great help to the park department.

Large Trees Down

The destruction of shade trees and telephone poles by the storm was severe in many southern sections of the city. Out on Watson street, three big telephone poles, loaded with wires, were broken off close to the ground and toppled across the street. The blockade was complete. The poles also carried lighting service wires that had to be protected.

The damage near the Waterside mills, the Heinz Electric works and the U. S. Cartridge Co.'s property was also heavy.

On Whidden street a large tree went down across that thoroughfare, blocking the way and striking the home occupied by Axel Anderson, cutting off the front door entrance. John Noonan's yard was also blockaded.

The South common presented a worse picture this morning than it did yesterday, and many inhabitants in that neighborhood were getting free firewood.

A large elm tree on Fletcher street near the corner of Lagrange, was down, blocking the road and pulling down lighting and telephone wires on both sides of the roadway.

STORM NOTES

Telephone line-repair crews cleaned up the broken wires on Ann street this morning. Numerous large branches of elm trees hung on a dozen or more power and phone lines, doing much damage to lines and poles. One large pole near the corner of Merrimack street will have to be removed later.

The reports from Mt. Vernon, Arlington and Mt. Washington streets were similar to those coming in from the Belvidere sections. Many streets appeared to have been swept by a hail of shot and shell, and blockades were numerous with few workmen handy to clear the ways.

Ovila Lajoie, Merrimack street business man, protected a mass of weeping willows at his home by attaching a hose to his home hot water tank and spraying the trees, removing all ice without breaking the boughs. He was the only man on his street to protect his shrubbery that way, and the idea is spreading all over the city this afternoon, women with cans of warm water and kettles of soapsuds filled with salt solutions giving their lawn shrubs and hardy annuals a novel bath.

The situation in Belvidere is almost indescribable. Huntington and Porter streets and Fort Hill avenue were still impassable this afternoon in many places owing to fallen trees. A large maple tree at the corner of Huntington and Porter streets, one greatly admired for many years, fell a prey to the storm.

The stores in many cases have been unable to fill demands for kerosene lamps and oil. There has been a heavy demand in all sections of the city, and stores with old-fashioned hand-lamps were deluged with customers. Some lamps sold for 50 cents each, some stores got more. No advance was made in prices, and each customer got what he wanted as long as the supply lasted.

Centralville people cleaned out its supply of lamps and lanterns early last evening. Lakeview avenue stores reported "all sold" as early as 7 o'clock.

The supply of shovels at the street department employes was done around the sewer openings and catch basins. It was said at city hall that numerous basins in the down town section were clogged up and required digging out.

The ssupply of shovels at the street department headquarters ran out at 10 o'clock, and hurry calls to various hardware stores resulted in the discovery that there is a real shovel famine. No extra tools could be bought, and some of the men engaged for the shovel brigade will be put to work with brooms and hoes.

Three telephone and light poles were reported down on Mount Hope street this morning. Great damage was done to the wires at the corner of Mount Hope and White streets. The "live" wires were guarded all the morning until linemen could get there. The area appeared to have been struck by a big shell.

Several big trees and many branches are reported down on Colonial avenue in the Textile school territory.

DEC. 4 TO 10 EDUCATION WEEK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Harding issued a proclamation today setting apart the week of Dec. 4 to 10 as American education week, during which citizens of the United States are urged to assist general efforts to reduce illiteracy and give thought to remedying defects in the nation's educational system.

Actress Tells Secret

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture

Joicey Williams, the well known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—Adv.

ULSTER AND SINN FEIN MAY UNITE

May Some Day Unite "Of Their Own Free Wills," Says Ulster Chief

LONDON, Nov. 29—(By the Associated Press) Admission of the possibility that Ulster and the south of Ireland may some day unite "of their own free wills" in the government of all Ireland, is ascribed to Sir James Craig, Ulster premier, in an interview published today by the Daily Mirror.

"I do not say that Ulster will never accept an all-Ireland council, though the Sinn Fein says it will never accept any other scheme." Sir James is quoted as saying: "What we say is, let the Sinn Fein first prove its ability to govern itself along constitutional lines. Let it win Ulster's confidence by practical proof of its fairness and impartiality toward the southern Unionists. Then in the course of time, the two Irish governments might coalesce of their own free wills."

Sir James says while Ulster remains a part of the United Kingdom, England can always land troops in Ireland by way of Ulster, if Great Britain's safety should be "jeopardized."

If Ulster should accept all of Sinn Fein's demands, Sir James continues, "England would then banish Ulster from its mind." He adds: "If Sinn Fein began to oppress Ulster under the All-Ireland council, England would then answer Ulster's complaints by saying: 'You accepted the council; you must manage your own affairs now.' Indeed, England would have no right to interfere."

Ulster Newspaper

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Preparations are being made here to publish a newspaper with morning and evening editions, devoted to the cause of Ulster, according to the Daily Mirror, which says 250,000 pounds has already been raised for the purpose.

Optimistic Over Ireland

LONDON, Nov. 29 (by the Associated Press).—Political commentators in morning newspapers view the Irish situation with unusual calm. They appear to adopt the view ascribed to official circles that, even though the peace movement receives a setback now, it may ultimately reach a satisfactory conclusion.

Craig Says Offer Impossible

BELFAST, Nov. 29.—(By the Associated Press)—Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, speaking before the northern parliament here today, said he had told Prime Minister Lloyd George that the British government's proposals to Ulster for the settlement of the Irish question were utterly impossible. He said Ulster would not enter an all-Ireland parliament under the present conditions, but was prepared to discuss other avenues for settlement.

The premier said the accounts of the government's plans for an all-Ireland parliament that had appeared in the press were "fairly accurate."

Replying to a question, he said the Northern Ireland cabinet had given instructions for the immediate enrollment of 500 while time "specials" and 5000 part time "specials" to complete the establishment of these forces.

Why Dread Old Age?

It don't make much difference how old you are if you only keep in good health and are active. Many people appear older at 50 than others do at 70, to keep looking young you have got to enjoy good health, and do as little worrying as possible. Backaches, swollen joints and legs, disturbed sleep by being compelled to arise one or more times during the night are sure symptoms of kidney trouble, and should have immediate attention to avoid serious consequences. SEVEN BARKS, nature's remedy of roots and herbs, is one of the best remedies to take not only for affected kidneys, but for liver, stomach and heart troubles.

Middle-aged people realize that they cannot perform their work or move around as fast as formerly. The intestinal organs feel the effect of age and do not perform their work properly. The heart palpitates on the slightest exertion and the back aches after a day's work. The muscles and flesh get flabby, and the blood thinner than formerly, it is then you need a good tonic and bowel regulator—you cannot find a more reliable and efficient remedy for those conditions than SEVEN BARKS.

If you want to enjoy life, recover some of your youthful vigor and have the glow of health, get SEVEN BARKS of your druggist. Do not accept a substitute.—Adv.

Adventures of the Twins

"THE STOLEN KEY"

WHEN HE HAD GONE, MR. PIM PIM TURNED TO NANCY AND NICK

The twins liked Mr. Pim Pim at once. He was the fat, funny little leader of the Brownies, you know, and the children had come to help him. What does fatness, or funniness, or plumpiness count for if one's eyes are kind and merry? And Pim Pim's eyes were the nicest ever.

"I must be going now," said the magical mushroom when the how-do-you-do's were over. "You children are all right with your magical shoes 'n' all, and I'm sure that the three of you will get along famously. Mr. Pim Pim will show you where to dig the sparkling colors for the Christmas toys and if I am not mistaken, he has two enchanted shovels to give you. But there! Pim Pim will tell you all about that himself. I'm only being a gossip. Bye-bye, kiddies! Be good!" Then kissing them both affectionately and shaking hands with the Brownie king, off went the good old fairy. Or rather out he went, like a candle flame when you blow it. One instant he was there and the next he wasn't, that was all! That's what comes of being magical.

When he had gone, Mr. Pim Pim turned to Nancy and Nick. "Well, well, well!" he said. "You couldn't have come at a better time, for Kip has been cutting up high jinks. You know he used to be leader of the Brownies and is now trying to do what he can to hinder me in my work. What do you think he's done? Stolen the key to my cupboard where I had the shovels hidden! The worst of it is that he's skipped off through the secret passage to the village of the gnomes, and if he gives the gnomes the key, dear knows when we'll ever get it. The gnomes have as many secret places to hide things as a porcupine has quills."

MAY CANONIZE BISHOP NEUMANN

ROME, Nov. 29—(By the Associated Press) The Congregation of Rites, which deals with the questions of the beatification and canonization of saints, met yesterday in the presence of the pope to discuss the heroism and virtues of Rt. Rev. John N. Neumann, bishop of Philadelphia from 1852 to his death in 1860.

John Nepomucene Neumann was born in Prachatitz, Bohemia, March 28, 1811, and was ordained a priest in New York by Bishop Dubois in 1836. After serving in missions, he was appointed in 1844 superior of the Redemptorist convent of Pittsburgh. He wrote a catechism and Bible history for use in schools, and in 1846, was appointed superior of the American province.

He was rector of St. Alphonsus' church in Baltimore before his appointment as bishop of Philadelphia. Steps toward his canonization were taken in 1884, but were not completed.

MAY REVISE MINIMUM WAGE SCALE

(Special to The Sun)

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Wages paid to women and to minors employed in retail stores will probably be revised in the near future, through action of a wage board which was reconvened last night, by the minimum wage division of the department of labor and industries.

The board was originally organized in 1915, and at that time established a minimum scale of wages, which has since been in effect. The scale, which is the minimum that may be paid to workers, is:

Women more than 18 years of age, and with more than one year's experience in a retail store, $8.50.

Inexperienced workers, more than 18 years of age, $7 per week.

Minors between 16 and 17 years, $6 per week.

Minors less than 17 years old, $5 per week.

On the board which convened tonight for a private conference, are three representatives of the public, Prof. Carroll W. Doten of Cambridge, chairman; Miss Mertha M. Weed and Dr. William M. Tenney, both of Boston. Representing the employes are Mrs. Grace M. Brown, Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, D. J. Nally and Miss Julia S. O'Connor, all of Boston; Mrs. E. F. Maguire of Newton, and Joseph O'Keefe of Worcester.

Employers are represented by Walter A. Hawkins of Jordan, Marsh and Co.; Abbott B. Rice of the Glen Shirt and Collar Co., Boston; Felix Vorenberg of the Gilchrist Co., Boston; George B. Johnson of R. H. White and Co., Boston; A. E. Bardon of Boston and Harry Chabby of Brockton.

PELLETIER DENIES ALLEN'S CHARGES

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Attorney General J. Weston Allen charged before the full bench of the supreme court yesterday that District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier of Suffolk county, in a speech as candidate for mayor had asserted that members of the court "take their orders" from financiers who are members of the exclusive Union club. The attorney general was arguing before the court for a speedy trial on charges on which he seeks Pelletier's removal from office.

Pelletier, in replying, asserted that the charge was a "lie." "I never said it," he continued. "It is a plant; it is a misstatement. I will answer that here and now. I never said that at anytime."

SALVADO GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Antonio I. Salvado, aged 28, of Holyoke, was sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday afternoon in the superior criminal court, East Cambridge by Judge John F. Brown, after he had pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, when arraigned on an indictment charging him with murder in the first degree. Salvado's plea of second degree guilt was accepted by Dist. Atty. Saltonstall.

Salvado was charged with the murder of Paulos Torre, a foreman in charge of a section gang of which Salvado was a member, while the men were working on the state road in Littleton. Torre's body was found on the morning of Oct. 13 last in a patch of woods, a bullet hole in his head and his money belt missing.

Shortly after the finding of the body Salvado was placed under arrest and subsequently indicted by the Middlesex county grand jury.

DENIES MAYOR CALLS CHICAGO GERMAN CITY

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago did not classify Chicago as "the sixth German city in the world" his attorney David H. Jackson, declared in his argument before Judge Brothers of the circuit court, on the demurrer of the mayor in the latter's $500,000 libel suit against the Chicago Tribune.

The judge took part in the discussion when Attorney Jackson, reading quotations from the Tribune article which formed the basis for the mayor's suit, came to the alleged quotations "the sixth German city."

"Is it your contention," asked the judge, "that he did not say it."

"Yes, it is," replied Attorney Jackson.

Attorney Weymouth Kirkland here interjected that "there were six people present when he said it."

Attorney Jackson said more than once that reporters had "coaxed" Mayor Thompson into making statements that would suit their own purposes.

NO REDRESS IF WRONG HOUSE IS RAIDED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—Prohibition agents who raided the wrong house after exercising the usual care can not be held to blame, prohibition Commissioner Haynes held yesterday in exonerating E. B. Henson, a special agent, from charges preferred by Mayor Stewart of Savannah, Ga.

Henson was charged by the Savannah mayor in protests sent to President Harding and the Georgia senators with having entered the private residence of Miss Bessie Garden of that city "without justification and apparently without a warrant."

Commissioner Haynes instituted an inquiry and was advised by Henson that the Garden home was raided by mistake, the entrance having been made from the rear by the raiding party which had a warrant for a house nearby. The explanation was considered as satisfactory by Mr. Haynes, it was announced today at prohibition headquarters.

DEATH TOLL IN MOVIE HOUSE FIRE NOW 6

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—Two more persons who were burned in the fire which destroyed the Rialto theatre Sunday night, died today, making the actual death list six, the coroner having eliminated the name of Timothy Hanlon, who was a victim of heart disease. Those who died today were Everett Case and Victor Cortelier, both of this city.

The deaths last night were those of Allen Keith, a Yale sophomore whose home was in Southport, Conn., and Miss Mabel Moran, a telephone operator at Derby, Conn.

The funeral of Keith will take place from Battell chapel tomorrow afternoon and his classmates will attend in a body.

It is said of Keith that after getting out of the theatre unharmed he returned and assisted a number of women, returning again to search for others. It was on his last trip, which he prolonged in order to grope about in the smoke, that he was burned. His mother, Mrs. R. C. Gilmore of Southport, was called to the bedside yesterday.

SOCIETY OF INDUSTRIAL SCIENCE

The next meeting of the Lowell Society of Industrial Science will be held Wednesday, November 30, at the Y.M.C.A., at 7.30 p.m. Mr. R. E. Frederick of this city, will address the society on the topic, "Vocational Training as Applied to Industry." The talk will be illustrated with stereopticon views through the kindness of the state department of education. Mr. Frederick has given this talk before several groups in Lowell and is well qualified to talk on the subject, as he has had much experience as a vocational teacher. Admission is free and all those interested are invited to attend.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

N. Y. WOMEN POLICE OFFICERS CALLED OUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The clarion call to duty sounded for the first time yesterday in the ears of New York's 2500 woman traffic police—called out, official orders said, to replace male regulars assigned to protect milk wagons during the milk handlers' strike.

But the day dawned, cold and sodden with rain and orders, nearly 80 per cent. of the women cops reflected, said nothing about going out in the rain.

Throughout the day curious pedestrians sought but failed to find the turnout of "blue petticoats" quite up to expectations. A poll completed last night revealed that 562 had reported and been assigned to busy corners near public schools. "But we were deluged with phone calls from women who want to become traffic police," reported Sergt. George M. Rennselaer, in charge of the women's headquarters. Applications, he said, would be accepted.

DISABLED VETERANS HOLD MEETING

The Lowell post of the Disabled American Veterans' association met in Memorial hall last evening with an attendance of 150 members. George Whelton, president pro-tem, presided, with Mr. Kelly acting as temporary secretary. The assembly voted to apply for a charter at the state headquarters in Boston, which, it is expected, will be in the possession of the post at its next meeting, Monday evening, December 5, also in Memorial hall. Election of permanent officers is to be held at that meeting and a representative of state headquarters will be on hand to address the members outlining the purpose and aim of the organization and instructing those who still have disability claims against the government how to file the same. A large number of disabled veterans of the world war, not only from Lowell, but also from nearby towns, have signified avowed intentions of joining this post and the next meeting will bring out a large attendance, the chairman feels.

HIGH RECORD FOR LIBERTY BONDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Five of the more active issues comprising the Liberty bond and Victory note securities rose to new high records for a year or more on the stock exchange yesterday. Their advance coincides with further enormous accumulations, presumably from investment sources.

The second 4's gained 18 cents per $100 to 95.88; first 4¼'s, 82 cents to 97.00; second 4¼'s, 16 cents, to 96.14, and fourth 4¼'s, 12 cents, to 95.50.

Victory 3¾'s made only a nominal advance of two cents to par, that figure, however, being a new high for the year. Victory 4¾'s duplicated their previous maximum of par on very large individual transactions, including one block of $1,000,000 and another of $500,000.

Boston Business Man Tells How He Keeps "As Fit as a Fiddle."

161 Dartmouth Street
Boston, Mass.
Nov. 3rd, 1921.

Messrs. Edward Lassere, Inc.,
400 West 23rd St., New York City.

Gentlemen:

I am now in my eighty-fifth year, and am enjoying much better health than the average person of my advanced age. My mental faculties retain their keenness; my step is still brisk and elastic; I have an abundance of energy; sleep soundly; have an excellent appetite; and am not unduly susceptible to colds. I am, in short, far more robust of mind and body than many much younger men and women of my own acquaintance. And I am convinced beyond shadow of doubt that I owe my present excellent physical and mental condition to Wincarnis.

Some five years ago, I began to feel the weight of accumulated years bear more and more heavily upon my frame. I tired quickly; lacked spirit and energy; spent restless nights; paid the usual penalty for every exposure to a draft, and had many a spell of mental depression. I made the usual experiments with preparations that were said to be tonics, with the result that I grew more and more discouraged—even to the point of despondency, I might say.

It was just at the time of my greatest dejection that I decided to try Wincarnis, and the quickness with which I felt reinvigoration returning was really astonishing and delightful. My restoration was as rapid as it was complete, and from that day to this I have taken a dose of Wincarnis at least once every day. A dose of this wonderful tonic every morning is the best of "uplifts" for one in need of stamina. Wincarnis is certainly the best tonic on the market, and it gives me genuine pleasure to say so.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Geo. H. Dupee.

BOXING

Promoter Dodge has finally untangled the snarl resulting from the Duffy-Gould disappointment and has now completed the card for Thursday night's show. In the final 10-rounder Mike Castle and Steve Gustin will mix it. Kid Lee of Chelsea, the tough little veteran of many ring encounters, will try to stow away Johnny (Tip) Quinn of Lowell in another 10-rounder. It will be a hard tussle for the local boxer. Red Madden of Lawrence will tackle the Gunner Jack, also of Lawrence, in one of the preliminaries.

Billy Nelson will try to head off the amateur champ in Gustin's camp and this squabble ought to be a summer. Johnny Moran is high in his praise of the C.M.A.C. youngster and Joe Walsh will find his first professional fight no snap.

Rarely has any incident of the ring created the discussion that "Wild Man" Gould's infraction of the Marquis of Queensbury rules at Fall River a week ago has caused. Many times it has happened that a boxer, resenting the attitude of a referee in the ring, has let go a punch in the direction of the official, but not within the memory of many of the older followers of the ring in this vicinity at least, has it ever before been recorded where a boxer actually knocked out a referee. Report from the "battle front" say that the incident, while serious was funny, and few in the hall could refrain from joining in the general hilarity that followed. "It was a scream," says one report. "Nothing like it in ring history" says another. And so on, but all agree, the referee making it unanimous, that the "wild one" was never wilder and never hit any harder than when he landed the wallop that sent the official into slumberland long enough to permit the enraged boxer to toll off the fatal ten.

Leo Flynn, matchmaker for the Madison Square garden, has an attractive show scheduled for this evening. The main fracas shows Champion Benny Leonard against George Ward. Willie Jackson will attempt to eliminate Jimmy Hanlon from the list of contenders, Joe Gorman and Earl Baird will try and settle which one of them is entitled to a chance at Johnny Kilbane's crown, and last but not least the sterling Dane, Pete Hartley, mingles with Joe Benjamin, the sensational coast boxer. All these bouts are for 10 rounds and each team is evenly matched and some real fights are expected.

Jock Malone, the flashy St. Paul middleweight, will give Pal Reed an opportunity to wipe out the defeat he lacked on the Framingham man's record when they meet at Boston Friday night in a 10-round number.

Young Chakas, the rugged Manchester, N. H., lightweight, who has appeared several times in this vicinity, will trade wallops with Dick Russell of Lynn at Nashua Friday night in a 10-round bout.

Benny Valgar and Kid Murphy box at Yonkers, Dec. 1.

Mike Gibbons has been signed to box Frank Carbone at New Orleans Dec. 25.

California Issues Defi to the East

University of California has again won the championship title of the Pacific Coast conference.

The team which humbled Ohio State last year at the Tournament of Roses had no trouble annexing the coast title for the second time in succession.

Coach Andy Smith, the former University of Pennsylvania star, who has met with such great success at California, believes his eleven is better than anything in the east. What is more, Smith is willing, yes, anxious, to prove such a statement.

Who will play California at the coming Tournament of Roses is still a matter of doubt. An invitation has been extended to a number of the leading teams in the east.

"Brick" Muller, who was the big star at California last year, was hurt in the Nevada game, and has been on the shelf ever since. He is being carefully groomed for the big game with the east. However, a youngster by the name of Stephens has more than filled the bill at end.

Today's Sport Angle

This is the open season for football championships.

A lot of pencils and reams of paper are going to be used by the experts in their attack on comparative scores.

The other day a supporter of Iowa doped it out that Iowa on comparative scores was 63½ points better than Harvard. His dope was so intricate that no one but a college professor would have been able to decipher it.

Penn State was going great until the Pittsburgh game. That tie game with Glenn Warner's team has upset calculations a trifle.

Washington and Jefferson, which beat Pittsburgh 7 to 0, is pointing to that victory to prove that it is a stronger team than Penn State.

In the middlewest Notre Dame and Iowa are the big favorites for college championship of the universe. On the coast they are shouting the praises of Andy Smith's California eleven.

Because of the scrambled condition of the Big Three, due to Princeton's victory over Harvard, Yale's win over Princeton and Harvard's defeat of Yale, no claims are being made.

It is to be regretted that there is no way to settle the college honors to the satisfaction of all concerned. However, it is absolutely impossible to arrange schedules that will meet the situation.

While the public is interested as to who is really the champion, few of the colleges consider it of any great importance.

The sport is the thing with the colleges. Not who won the championship.

LOWELL WON FROM FALL RIVER LAST NIGHT

The Lowell pololsts got back into their winning stride last night and defeated the Fall River club at the Crescent rink by the score of 7 to 3.

The visiting players did not arrive until 9 o'clock, due to the storm, but the fans waited patiently and gave them a good reception when they reached the rink.

Lowell played superior polo and had little difficulty in landing the verdict. Alexander, Davies and Quigley had their combination offensive working to perfection and Morrison and Blount performed up to the mark in the defensive.

"Bob" Hart of Fall River played hard, driving as of old, but he failed to get one by Blount's pads. Earl Pierce appeared on the rush line with Hart, but he failed to "feed" Hart well enough to enable the hard and accurate driving rush to be at his best. Foley at halfback for the visitors played great polo.

After the first period Lowell had it all its own way, with Alexander starring in the scoring activities.

It was announced that Providence will come here Saturday afternoon to play off the game which was thrown out by Sec. Perrin as a result of Capt. Quigley's protest. The lineup:

PROVIDENCE 4, NEW BEDFORD 3

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 29.—The classiest game of polo seen here, was the verdict of the large crowd of fans who turned out to witness the game here last night in which Providence nosed out New Bedford, 4 to 3. The count was 3-1 going into the third period and when the Goldbugs nicked another for good measure, it looked as though the Whalers' fate was sealed. The wizardy of Duggan netted a brace of registers, however, and for the remainder of the distance both quintets made the going as fast as has been seen in any polo exhibition ever staged here. Lyons, the Goldbug back, played his usual fine game, and he smothered many drives that were labelled for the Providence net. The score:

POLO NOTES

Last night's attendance was of fair size, despite the storm.

It was announced that New Bedford will play here Friday night and Providence Saturday afternoon, the latter game being a play-off of the game of last Friday night, thrown out by the league secretary as a result of Capt. Quigley's protest over Referee Ford's decisions.

The work of Referee Kilgara was very satisfactory.

"Molly" Morrison again broke into the scoring column, when he succeeded in caging a brace of goals last night.

LOWELL MEN HONORED

Gold Medals for Members of the Tipperary Gaelic Football Team

That Lowell still retains her prestige in all branches of sport was again demonstrated on Sunday night, when five Lowell men, members of the Tipperary Gaelic football team, were presented with gold medals at the closing session for the 1921 season of the Massachusetts Gaelic football league in Historic hall, Deacon building, Boston.

Representatives of 15 teams were present when the 15 members of the Tipperary team were presented medals of Celtic Cross design, beautifully engraved with Irish characters. The Tipperary boys went through the season undefeated in a league game, although the Lowell St. Enda's team defeated them in a game in the early part of the season. A pleasing program was presented, including addresses by several of the leading officials of Cambridge and Boston, and a literary and musical program.

Francis Tiernan, president of the Irish Country clubs of Boston, was the principal speaker. He spoke of the great aid in the promotion of Gaelic sports afforded by the winning team during the 1921 season. After the address the members of the team were decorated with the medals by John J. Foley, state vice president of the A.A.R.I.B., and past president of the Boston Irish Country clubs.

The Lowell men who received medals were: Paddy White, Daniel Clancy, John Cunningham, George Conboy and Michael F. Quinn. They also played with the St. Enda's team of Lowell, which is expected to enter the state league next year.

Billy Evans Picks All-Eastern Football Team

BY BILLY EVANS

Picking an All-Eastern football eleven is ordinarily a rather easy task, as certain players usually stand out prominently.

This year it is different in the east. There are a lot of mighty good football players on the eastern elevens, but only one who is the premier at his position, Killinger of Penn State.

For the past 15 years it was the exception to have the critics differ on more than three positions. It was almost a certainty from the start of the season as to the leaders in the other positions.

It is going to be mighty different this year. A lot of the experts in the east are going to differ widely in their selections. This was evident to me at the Yale-Princeton game. I asked five of the leading experts of the east as to the best ends. Snively of Princeton was the only player to get as many as three votes in the five selections.

Last year Stanley Keck of Princeton was practically a unanimous choice for tackle. He was regarded as the best in the east, yes, in the country, at that position. Keck is as good if not a better tackle this year, but injuries prevented him from being at his best in the Yale game. A number of critics for that reason may weaken on Keck, but to my way of thinking it is impossible to overlook his great ability.

In the west McGuire is rated as a great tackle. In the first two periods of the Chicago-Princeton game McGuire slightly outplayed Keck. Coach Roper easily explained this by saying Princeton had expected Chicago to play an open game, and that he had instructed his line to play high and keep their heads up. Instead, Chicago played a running game off tackle and round the ends. The Chicago forwards charging low were making trouble for the Princeton line, and McGuire was putting Keck out of many a play.

Keck Is Real Star

McGuire himself admits that when Keck got down and started to charge low, it was impossible to make any advance against him. Into of Yale draws the other tackle.

The ends in the east this year are generally admitted to be below the standard. In fact there are not very many good ends in the east. Snively of Princeton is a wonder at throwing forward passes and is a good defensive player.

Macomber of Harvard makes a fine running mate for Snively. On offense he knows how to box the tackle and is a wonder at getting interference out of the way. He is also a good man at receiving the forward pass. Sturm of Yale and McCollum of Penn State are two other good ends.

Brown of Harvard is just about the best guard in the east. In the Yale game he was at his peak. He smeared most of the plays directed at him, and made many tackles behind the line. Carney of Annapolis is also a mighty fine guard. His work has featured practically every game the Navy has played. Against Princeton he scored the touchdown that beat the Tigers. Baker of Princeton is close up.

Stein at centre has played his usual fine game. In only the Nebraska game has he failed to shine. He has been the strength of the Pittsburgh line, and has done more open field tackling than any man on the team. Wittmer of Princeton and Shurtleff of Brown are close rivals.

Killinger gets the quarterback job He is the one outstanding star of the east, who can do everything well.

Aldrich Gets Position

Aldrich of Yale by his fine work all year and his stellar performances against Princeton and Harvard, is entitled to one of the halfback positions. I have my doubts as to the other. I like Davies of Pittsburgh. True, he has not been in the headlines as much this year, however, not due to any weakness on his part but rather his team. He is such a great player that it is almost impossible to pass him up. Mallory of Yale, Lightner of Penn State, Kaw of Cornell, Robertson of Dartmouth and Gilroy of Princeton are other good backs.

Owen of Harvard has played consistently good football all year, and I have placed him at fullback.

ZBYSZKO BEATS LEWIS

Wrestling Champion Wins Two of Three Falls and Retains His Title

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Wrestling rules of years ago were enforced here last night, and recognition was given the rolling falls, which enabled Stanislaus Zbyszko to retain his heavyweight wrestling title in a finish match with Ed (Strangler) Lewis.

Lewis won the first fall last night with a flying headlock after 17 minutes and 31 seconds of wrestling. Zbyszko was awarded the second fall after 21 minutes 26 seconds and the third fall, also of the rolling type, came in 14 minutes 56 seconds. Zbyszko taking Lewis to the mat with a double armlock.

MAY CHANGE COACHES

Failure of a number of the major colleges to have a big year in football has caused rumors to float about that changes will be made in the coaching systems. Dartmouth is already planning for something better. It is intended to have a head coach and two assistants. The absolute failure of Minnesota makes it seem that "Doc" Williams is about through. Early reverses at Michigan brought criticism for Yost. Michigan, however, in the last two games has showed a decided improvement.

WINTER FOOTBALL PRACTICE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Winter football practice got under way at the University of Pennsylvania today. One hundred and twenty-five men reported for the first practice yesterday but rain caused a postponement. The innovation is the result of Pennsylvania's season of gridiron defeats.

Nearly all babies in the Samoa are taught to swim by the time they are 3 or 4 years old.

LOWELL TEXTILE BASKETBALL SQUAD

Tomorrow afternoon a squad of 20 or more basketball players will report to Captain Lombard to try for places on Lowell Textile's quintet. The call for candidates came after the Thanksgiving recess. A 14-game schedule has been arranged by Manager James A. Nary and from a glance at the list the local hoopsters are in for an extremely busy winter.

Boston college is booked for two games this season, one to be played here Feb. 3, and the other in Boston on Feb. 14. Last year it was the great all around work of Luke Urban of the maroon and old gold that sent the local boys to defeat. It will be a different story this year as Urban has since been graduated.

The team this year will be built around Capt. Lombard, Schneider, Smith and Matthews. While it seems only one man is needed, it is expected there are several in the freshman class who will fight hard to gain a place on the five.

The schedule follows:

Fitchburg Normal, Jan. 7, at Lowell.
Providence college, Jan. 13, at Lowell.
New Hampshire State, Jan. 18, at Durham.
Northeastern college, Jan. 21, at Lowell.
New Bedford Textile, Jan. 28, at Lowell.
Boston college, Feb. 3, at Lowell.
Norwich university, Feb. 9, at Northfield, Vt.
University of Vermont, Feb. 10, at Burlington, Vt.
St. Michael's college, Feb. 11, at Burlington, Vt.
Boston college, Feb. 14, at Boston.
University of Vermont, Feb. 17, at Lowell.
Fall River Textile, Feb. 24, at Lowell.
Rhode Island State, Feb. 28, at Kingston, R. I.
Open, March 4.
Open, March 8.
Norwich university, March 11, at Lowell.

MINNESOTA COACH LAUDS DEVINE

All the experts seem agreed that Arthur Devine is a football player extraordinary.

Dr. Williams, famous coach at the University of Minnesota, has a mighty good opinion of Devine.

Iowa trimmed Minnesota 41 to 7. Devine made five touch-downs in bringing about the rout of Minnesota, so it is only natural that Williams should have some kind words to say.

"Arthur Devine is not only of All-America calibre," says Williams, "but is the best all around backfield man I ever saw play. He rates higher than Johnny McGovern or Walter Eckersall."

FAVOR NEW SCHEDULE

Princeton and Yale favor a change in the football schedule with Harvard. The present scheme, which has been in vogue for some time, brings Harvard and Princeton together first, then Princeton and Yale, and finally Yale and Harvard. This gives Harvard a two weeks' rest between games, while Yale and Princeton play on successive Saturdays. Princeton and Yale rightly contend there should be a rotation of the schedule each year.

WEST VS. EAST POPULAR

While games between Yale, Harvard and Princeton will always go big because of the color and rivalry that always exists, the trend of football is toward intersectional games. The great showing by the western teams has created unusual interest in such games. A number have already been suggested for next year.

CONROY NEW NAVY LEADER

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29—The members of the naval academy football team elected Vincent P. Conroy of Ogden, Utah, to captain the team for next season, taking the place of Emory E. Larson who has filled that position so successfully, but who graduates in June.

Conroy was promoted from squad B to the varsity squad late in the season of 1919, and has played regularly in the backfield for two seasons.

Conroy has played an excellent game this year, though he has not carried the ball so much as Borchat or Koehler; however, he has done a good share of this work and has directed the playing during most of the important games this season. He is regarded as highly qualified to fill the position. He is one of the academy's finest athletes, being a regular of the lacrosse twelve and a member of the wrestling squad. In last Saturday's game against the Army, Conroy scored the only touchdown, and it is admitted that he handled the team in masterly style.

GILROY CAPTAIN OF PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29—Ralph C. Gilroy, of Haverhill, Mass., a junior was yesterday elected to be captain of Princeton football eleven next fall. The election came according to the annual custom. Immediately following the picture of the men who took part in either this year's Harvard or Yale games.

No other man, eligible to the captaincy, has had anything like the experience of Gilroy. He was defensive halfback on his freshman team and immediately won the same position on the varsity of two years ago and held it through last season and this. The new leader has a record in that he has started in every varsity game since he became eligible in sophomore year to go out for it. He prepared at Haverhill high school and his prep school experience consisted of two years on that team and two years at Exeter as a halfback in 1917 and 1918.

Ralph Gilroy is 21 years old. Weighs 165 pounds and is five feet, eight and one-half inches high. Gilroy is a man of iron and has not been really injured during his entire football career. At Exeter he played in the same backfield as did Don Lourie.

SEEK COLLEGE STAR

Huffman, who has played a great game at tackle for Ohio State this fall, is also a star ball player. He is said to be one of the best catchers in the western conference. As a collegian Huffman is a hard hitter, great thrower and fine receiver. He is also fast for a big fellow. He led the state team in stolen bases last season. It is said that Business Manager Bobby Quinn of St. Louis has tendered Huffman a contract and is willing to give him a chance to show his worth as a big leaguer.

YALE CAPTAIN STARS

The remarkable playing of Captain Aldrich of Yale in both the Harvard and Princeton game ranks him as one of the greatest backfield men in the history of that institution. Aside from his great work on the gridiron, Aldrich was the outstanding figure on the Yale baseball team last season. Aldrich is All-America calibre.

TRACK COACH AT B.U.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The appointment of Oscar Hedlund, holder of the two-mile indoor track record and a member of the 1912 Olympia team as track coach at Boston university, was announced today. Hedlund's specialty when he was competing was the mile run and in 1912 he equalled the mile indoor record of 4.19 4-5.

BABE RUTH WILL ASK $85,000 FOR 1922

BY BILLY EVANS

Fifty thousand dollars from the New York Americans, and five thousand dollars from each other club in the American league.

That is the salary that Babe Ruth will ask for the season of 1922. I have Babe's word for it.

Ruth had a sliding contract with the New York American league club last year. His actual salary was $20,000. He received a bonus for his home-run record, which perhaps carried the figure to $35,000. Ruth's contract with the American league expired at the close of the 1921 season. When he confers with the New York club, he intends to ask a combined salary that will total $85,000, which is $10,000 in advance of what the president of the United States receives.

This will be the first time that a player has demanded a salary from other clubs in the league, to which he is in no way affiliated other than being a member of the same organization.

"I broke the home-run records in 1920 and 1921," says Ruth. "Likewise I broke a lot of attendance records. Fifty-nine home runs are a large flock. I am going to be mighty lucky if I break that mark in 1922. If I don't break it, I am going to fade out of the picture.

"I am a big card right now; the moment I quit smacking those old home runs, every one is going to forget all about me.

"The time to get the dough, is to get it while the getting is good. If I can't get it now, I never will be able to come through.

"I feel that I am an asset at the gate to every club in the league, that is why I feel the burden of my salary should be divided."

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

Meeting Now in Session in Washington Described by Congressman Rogers

Members of Hamilton Manufacturing Association Hear Highly Interesting Lecture

The world disarmament conference now sitting at Washington, its exact makeup, its purpose, its accomplishments so far, the problems it faces and must solve the results it is likely to achieve, all that this meeting of the nations' greatest statesmen aims to accomplish was vividly described by Congressman John Jacob Rogers in an interesting address before the members of the Hamilton Manufacturing association last night.

The speaker drew a realistic picture of that select gathering now sitting in the capital discussing the topic that is the momentous subject among the powers of the world today. He described the general purpose of the conference, the nations represented, with the aid of a blackboard showed the layout of the conference hall, the exact positions occupied by the delegates, told of the most noteworthy characteristics of the men, their aims and views, intermingled his lecture with funny inklings relative to some of the foreign representatives, referred to the points sought by some of the nations, indicated what the meeting thus far had done, and in a most clear and interesting fashion set forth the real questions confronting the conference, matters just now attracting the glaring focus of entire civilization.

For an hour and a half the congressman held the attention of several hundred persons who braved the elements to hear Mr. Rogers.

The meeting was opened by Agent A. D. Milliken who made brief reference to the course of lectures being given during the winter. The next one, it was announced, will be given on January 12 by former district attorney E. Mark Sullivan, of Boston. The speaker of the evening was presented by M. E. Markell, president of the association.

HON. JOHN JACOB ROGERS

Taking a piece of chalk in hand and using a blackboard as background the congressman outlined the famous hall quartering the conference, showed the seats occupied by all those present, making appropriate references to each individual as he went along.

After he had given a general survey of the meeting Congressman Rogers picked the statesmen representing the United States as the first delegates he should describe. It would have been a mighty hard task to select a quartet better fitted to represent this nation at the conference than the four men, Messrs. Hughes, Lodge, Root and Underwood, picked to sit at the head of that round table of discussion, the speaker said. He exalted each member of the United States delegation highly and talked at considerable length on the many qualifications the four distinguished statesmen possess.

He referred to each one of the four as "the right man in the right place," and commenting on the opening speech of Mr. Hughes, he said the secretary of state had performed the most extraordinary piece of work possible.

"Secretary Hughes presented a tangible plan right at the outset providing in that way something for the delegates to aim at in a clear and direct light. His address gave the world a new hope for the future, and let me say right here that should the conference succeed, the greater part of the success will be due to Mr. Hughes," Congressman Rogers asserted.

The Foreign Delegates

The speaker gave clear conceptions of the British, French, Italian, and Belgian delegates, at times drawing laughs from the audience by touching on some peculiarity of the foreigners which he particularly noticed while he attended the first few meetings. This was especially true of the Chinese and Japanese representatives and of delegates from smaller countries and possessions of large powers.

"And besides all these delegates, who are sitting, as I have shown, on the four sides of this table," the lecturer continued as he pointed to a diagram he had finished on the board, "there are hundreds of so-called advisors sitting directly behind the men who are representing their country. It is hence a conclusive fact that there will be no scarcity of advice, but I imagine it will be a hard job to listen to all the good counsel those advisors are undoubtedly capable of giving."

Then coming down to the many translators, stenographers and newspaper correspondents swarming tables within the solemn square formed by the longer tables occupied by the delegates, the speaker warned the audience to beware of believing too much of accounts in some of the newspapers. He advised reading the reports of the Associated Press, regarding that service the most reliable and truthful, whereas hundreds of writers for papers throughout the country are wont to lean one way or the other on great vital issues, thus at times spreading propaganda. This latter event is particularly evident in many instances regarding the Chinese problem, he pointed out.

Dwelling on the real issue of the disarmament session the speaker stated that there are three topics before the conference: limitation of navies, limitation of armies, and the Far East problem.

Following an explanation of the 10 year naval holiday and scrapping program outlined by Secretary Hughes, Congressman Rogers opined that such a plan is highly feasible, that it will be accepted by all nations and put in operation. "Public opinion, however, I believe," he added, "goes further in that direction and wants the submarine eliminated as a weapon of piracy."

Army Limitation

Army limitation is very different from naval limitation and that topic needs to be treated in a light altogether varied from the previous one, he said.

Quoting the army strength of the various countries Congressman Rogers referred to France as the possessor of the biggest standing army among the so-called great powers, stating that there are at present about a million men ready to take up the country's cause in France. But France, the speaker said, believes she is justified in holding such a vast army. France has a superstitious awe for Germany, and even now, as she did years ago, she still fears raids and destruction at the hands of Germany. Premier Briand, the greatest of French statesmen, came to America long enough to voice in a speech that sounded throughout the world the fear that has been inculcated in the hearts of the French people for years and years. The premier hoped for an American-British alliance, but when he saw that such was out of the question he made known France's desire for a large army and her reasons for asking such a concession.

He called China the stumbling block of tangible results at the conference, and described the general state of chaos now existing in that country as depicted to him by the Chinese representatives at the sitting. The Chinese question is the real problem and just now it is very difficult to see exactly what will come out of it, and what is perhaps most peculiar is the fact that it is even impossible to bound correctly that country known as China.

There are three things of vital interest to the United States at the conference: Protection from invasion, which, however, is the universal vital interest; the Monroe Doctrine; and the open door in China. The latter is also looked on as a topic of vital interest by all nations, the speaker stated.

Moral Disarmament

"Premier Briand, of France, made an excellent statement, in my mind," said Congressman Rogers, "when he said in his address that there must be a moral disarmament before a material disarmament among nations can be effectively put in practice. And he was right. And more than that, there must be sacrifices on the part of all peoples if it is expected that the disarmament program be pursued with success. There are two illustrations that give me bright hope for success. One is the naval treaty that has existed between this country and Canada for 104 years regarding gunboats in the Great Lakes, and the other is the treaty that has been successfully maintained for the last 20 years between Argentina and Chile. What those treaties accomplished, it is my candid opinion, can be done in a worldly scale. The open door of China is the only doubtful question that looms up in my mind and as for that I have hope that something of a successful nature will be arrived at before the conference adjourns.

"It is my sincere belief that this meeting of world statesmen will make the world a better place to live in, and the hour when a treaty binding nations in a disarmament agreement will be passed will indeed be a solemn and glorious one."

The meeting was closed with several vocal selections by the well known "Four Harries" quartet of the company, namely, Harry Patten, C. Harry Howard, Harry Needham, and Harry Pascall.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, blossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Adv.

MASSACHUSETTS MILLS ATHLETIC CLUB

Members of the Massachusetts Mills Athletic association will be given a real treat Friday evening, when for their benefit a boxing exhibition will be staged in the quarters of the organization. The participants in the various bouts will all be employes of the mill, and it is said that the exhibition will be one of the bets of its kind ever conducted by the club. It is the intent and purpose of the association to conduct various social gatherings during the winter season, and its members are receiving the approval of Agent William A. Mitchell.

At a recent meeting of the association bowling was discussed at length, and in order to stimulate this sport in the mill circles it was decided to award prizes every week until Christmas to the team with the highest score. The matter of having the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. supply extra cars to soccer games when the team of the association is playing will be taken up with officials of the company, as the boys feel that if better accommodations were given the attendance at the games would be greater. Soccer, the members of the association claim, is becoming one of the favorite sports in New England, and they feel that before the season is over their team will be rated among the best in New England.

CALL COMING FOR TRACK CANDIDATES

The call for track candidates at the high school will be issued in the course of a few days by Captain Gus Normandin. Although it is a little early for the track season, Gus figures that it is necessary to get the men out earlier this year if they wish to equal the record made by last year's team. Last year the team went through the season without a defeat through the great work of Henny Forrest, Red O'Hare, Gus Cahill, Freddy Ryan and Captain Geggy McAdams. A great hole is left in the team by the graduation of these players.

Nevertheless, the team this year is expected to measure up to the standard of the teams of other years. The L men who are back are Captain Normandin, Sweeney, Jenkins, Flannigan, Bachman, Donahue and Leary. These form the nucleus of what should be a strong team.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

The U. S. ROYAL CORD TIRE

Unquestionably the outstanding merchandising success of the year—both in the eyes of the trade and of the car-owner.

When the U. S. books close for 1921, they will show U. S. Royal Cord sales nearly doubled over 1920.

What U. S. Tires say and do commands a greater audience than any other line of tires in the world.

Where is the tire dealer headed for in 1922

ALONG about this time of the year the tire-dealer is a much called upon man.

Probably a dozen different "Agencies" for a dozen different tires are hopefully spread before him.

But when he gets off by himself and starts to think he finds out that most so-called Agency Franchises are hardly more than permission to invest his money in this brand or that brand at his own risk.

Consider now—not what is said in behalf of the U. S. Tire Sales and Service Agreement—but what it does.

Consider general conditions for the past year. And note everywhere that U. S. Tire dealers have been the least affected of all.

Observe how generally the U. S. Tire dealer is respected. Not alone by the public but by his local competitors.

The U. S. Tire dealer always knows where he is at. Right now—or in making his plans for 1922.

He can always put his hands on the U. S. consistent merchandising policy.

Where the U. S. Sales Franchise separates from the rest and asserts its prerogatives are in these things—

It brings to the dealer's store the greatest and most loyal tire-audience anywhere.

It supports the dealer with the most constructive and courageous publicly expressed policies today.

It carries the prestige of the U. S. Royal Cord Tire and the "USCO" Tread.

It is the most sought after Franchise in the whole tire trade.

U. S. dealers will be the ranking tire-merchants of 1922. Not only in profits returned, but in local reputation as business citizens.

BLIGATIONS OF THE WAR

Frank A. Vanderlip Discusses Allies' Eleven Billion Dollar Debt to U. S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Recognition by the allies of their eleven billion dollar debt to America as a just debt, agreement by this country to easy payments and the money thus repaid to be used in rehabilitating Europe, was a plan proposed last night by Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker, for settling the obligations of the war.

Mr. Vanderlip, who returned recently from Europe where he made an exhaustive study of economic conditions, spoke before the Economic club. He said he had discussed the debt with the leading responsible government ministers and financiers of Europe, and nearly every nation admitted inability to pay.

The United States would be hurt as much by the rapid receipt of payment in the form of goods, the only possible form of payment in view of the demoralization of foreign exchange, he said, as the allied debtors would be harmed in making the payment.

"The full consequences would be profound," he said, "if the payments could be, made and were made with any degree of promptness. We need not look further than to contemplate merely the receipt of $500,000,000 a year of interest. If that came in the form of goods our industrial situation would be upset in a way and to an extent we have not heretofore experienced. The effect upon our labor situation and the consequent social problems which would be raised, would be menacing."

As the first postulate in his plan, Mr. Vanderlip said he would lay down the principle that the allied debt was a just debt, legally and morally, and whether it could be paid or not, it should be cheerfully and gratefully acknowledged as a just debt.

"Next, I would want America to be both an intelligent and a lenient creditor," he continues. "Terms of payment ought to be adapted to the means of our debtors. In that respect we should take the action of the allies in fixing the terms of the indemnity as an example to be avoided rather than followed.

"The crux of my plan would lie in the disposition of the payments.

"I would have America make a beau jeste; a grand gesture in international relationships. While demanding that the payment be made, I would have American that she is prepared for the present to forego the receipt of it."

Concerning what would be done with the money paid back, Mr. Vanderlip said:

"I would like to see every dollar that can ever be paid to us by our debtors for years to come, devoted to the rehabilitation of European civilization. It is only through such rehabilitation that these debts can ever conceivably be paid. It is only through the rehabilitation of European civilization that America can ever conceivably realize in full measure her destiny, or can expect a full measure of prosperity for her people."

He believed a plan for the development of Eastern Europe could be laid out, he said, comparable to the vision our forefathers had when the latent possibilities of our great west were unfolded to their minds.

"Everything the war has cost," he added, "everything an unwise peace is costing, can be recompensed, and beyond that a great economic margin created, if Eastern Europe can be put in order, can be helped and led wisely to handle its own problems, if the people of Eastern Europe can be made to comprehend their economic unity, if they can be brought to understand that in the welfare of all nations, lies the highest prosperity of each."

To a program of this kind, he declared, he would devote for many years every dollar this country could get of the allies' debt.

"We need not make an irrevocable decision when we embark on this program. For a good many years, I believe it would be wise for us to devote all we receive to such purposes as I have suggested. It is entirely possible, however, that there would come such economic restoration that in the end, a considerable part, conceivably nearly all of the principal, might be paid to us. Interest money that we loaned and re-loaned for economic development would be converted from the original obligation of the allies to obligations representing material properties which we created, and probably backed by the obligations of the governments of those countries where this economic development took place. The time might come when we would cease to make these sums revolving credits for European economic development, because there really would not be further need for us to do so. Then the money would come back to us.

"I am firmly convinced that in the great catastrophe the war has brought, there has been created an opportunity which could never otherwise have arisen. The obstacles which have arisen in the path of European civilization can be turned into stepping-stones leading to a position vastly better than anything Europe has ever known. The war has made a great awakening in millions of dormant minds. It is possible that newly awakened impulses, if they can be harnessed to the machinery of production and distribution, can result in a great actual improvement of civilization. That awakening, those impulses, are now disconnected from any machinery of commerce, and they may all be lost in a decaying civilization. We can help to turn them to account. The possibilities that there are in society for realizing better conditions for all humanity are undreamed of. The opportunity has arisen to make these possibilities realities.

THE AFFAIRS OF JANE

SAYS RUSSIA WILL BE ON HER FEET IN 5 YEARS

MOSCOW, Nov. 25.—(By a Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press)—Russia will be on her feet again and take her place among the wealth-producing nations of the world within the next four or five years, says Bela Kun, formerly Hungarian communist leader. He is now living with his wife and child in a small house attached to a hospital in the outskirts of Moscow.

He writes for the communistic press, is active in the Third Internationale and is well thought of in the councils of the "Big Five," who control affairs in Russia namely, Lenine, Trotsky, Kaminlev, Djerzinsky and Boukharin.

It will be recalled that Bela Kun was head of the communist government in Hungary for five months in the spring and summer of 1919 and had to flee when the Rumanian army invaded the country and completed the wreckage wrought by the world war. To the correspondent of The Associated Press he said.

"We are on the right road now, here in Russia. I am not speaking as an official of the soviet republic, but it is evident that the new economic policy will succeed. Russia will 'come back' in four or five years.

"You have just been through Russia. You see how rich she is rich as the United States in forests, in soil, in mines. Her people have broken down the old feudalism. They are at last free. They are being educated, and that is wealth, too.

"Surely, such a country should have a better chance of repaying foreign investments than bankrupt countries of western Europe lacking Russia's natural resources.

"The government here is finished with revolutions and is growing more stable and will and can protect foreign investments. Industrial or social revolutions may come elsewhere but we are through with them.

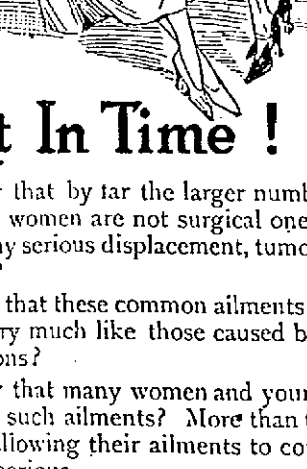

"Communism has not failed. Until now we were running a sort of war communism and we were hit by the foreign blockade too. With peace, the government will continue to control and own the great industries, and in the end will absorb all but the smaller ones. That doesn't mean there isn't room for foreign concessions. Russia is so big.

"We are not getting around to a democratic government like that of the United States. We are doing better. We are working to liberate the workers and try to prevent their exploitation.

"In considering business hazards with Russia, let the American business man remember that so far the United States has obtained only nice bits of paper, promises to pay from France, England and Italy, on the huge sums loaned there."

Bela Kun is working to overcome the famine which he fears may extend far into the next year, partly because of the lack of seed grain, which the soviet government can't provide in sufficient quantities, partly due to the hazards of weather. He is pushing the plan of an international loan to be launched through trade unions the world over. The plan is to have the soviet government guarantee the loan, to be issued in bonds from one dollar up.

Bela Kun believes that persons who might not otherwise subscribe to famine charity would buy these bonds, in the hope of their redemption, five or ten years hence, when the Russian government has recovered its financial credit.

Take It In Time!

DO you know that by far the larger number of the common ailments of women are not surgical ones; that is they are not caused by any serious displacement, tumor, growth, or other marked change?

DO you know that these common ailments produce symptoms that are very much like those caused by the more serious surgical conditions?

DO you know that many women and young girls suffer needlessly from such ailments? More than that, they endanger their health by allowing their ailments to continue and develop into something serious.

If treated early, that is, within a reasonable time after the first warning symptoms appear, serious conditions may often be averted. Therefore, at the first appearance of such symptoms as periodic pains, irregularities, irritability and nervousness, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken. It is prepared with accuracy and cleanliness from medicinal plants. It contains no narcotics nor poisonous drugs, and can be taken with perfect safety.

The Vegetable Compound acts on the conditions which bring about these symptoms in a gentle and efficient manner. The persistent use of it shows itself in the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms. In a word, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts as a natural restorative, relieving the present distress and preventing more serious trouble.

40 WITNESSES FOR PROSECUTION

Rebuttal Testimony Order of Day at Reopening of Arbuckle Trial Today

Mrs. Fox, Close Friend of Miss Rappe, Among Chief Witnesses

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Rebuttal testimony was the order of the day at the reopening of the Roscoe Arbuckle manslaughter trial today. The district attorney's office after a conference of all those engaged in the prosecution announced that about 40 witnesses would be heard.

Arbuckle's own story of the events at a party he gave in his suite in the Hotel St. Francis here, at which the prosecution contends he caused fatal injuries to Miss Virginia Rappe, was given to the jury yesterday. In substance, he said, he found her ill and did everything in his power to allay her suffering. Cross-examination failed to make him change any detail of his description.

Among witnesses on the prosecution's list for today was Mrs. Catherine Fox of Chicago, a close friend of Miss Rappe. It was intimated she would testify that Miss Rappe's health was good. The defense has contended a chronic ailment caused her death.

Girl in Tears at Trial

for dinner at 1 o'clock, she had not reached the point in her narrative where the assault is said to have taken place.

At the opening of court this morning, the case of the commonwealth was outlined by District Attorney Kenney. Mr. Kenney said that he would show that while Miss Butler and her escort, William O. Eldredge, Jr., whom he described as a man in stature, although he had not matured to the same extent mentally, were on their way home from a dance. At Bournehurst she was held up by one of the defendants by a revolver and ordered to enter an automobile. The two other defendants, both of whom had revolvers, grabbed Eldredge and ordered him into the car.

The party proceeded in the direction of Plymouth. Eldredge and Miss Butler being kept covered all the time. The three men demanded that Miss Butler and Eldredge give them all the money they had; the girl handed over less than a dollar, and Eldredge about $5. Near the railroad cut which the jury visited yesterday, Mr. Kenney said, the defendants stopped the car to measure the gasoline in the tank; finding the supply low, Dies and Andrews went to get some, while Gomes stood guard over Eldredge and Miss Butler in the rear of a cemetery nearby.

Finally the other two men returned without any gasolene and said: "She wouldn't give us any."

Girl Assaulted by All Three

"Go back and make her give it to you," they were told. Mr. Kenney said he would show that a Miss Kimball, near Lakecroft Inn was awakened twice that night by men seeking gasoline. She told them to go to the next house. The government would show that one of the defendants appeared later at Lakecroft with a five gallon can taken from Miss Kimball's premises, and that next morning an automobile left disabled nearby was found with the cap off the gasoline tank and the tank empty.

The gasolene tank replenished, the party drove off. The men had promised Miss Butler they would get her home safely, but later the car was stopped, Eldredge was ordered out, and the girl was assaulted by the three men in turn. They then took her name and Eldredge's, threatened them that if they ever told, they would be "got," and released them.

THE NO SCHOOL SIGNAL

Superintendent of Schools Recommends Something in Nature of Electric Siren

Relative to the 'no school' signal, and the annoyance to which he and others are subjected because people in outlying districts cannot hear the signal as given at present, Hugh J. Molloy, superintendent of schools, has made the following statement:

"This storm, with all its inconveniences, naturally suggests a few words concerning the 'no-school' signal. The ringing of the 'no-school' signal is decreed by the school committee of the city of Lowell, who have authorized the superintendent of schools to suspend the schools for one session when the weather is extremely stormy.

"During the greater part of the year there are three sessions of schools—in the morning, in the afternoon and in the evening, and the rule is that the signal shall be sounded one hour before the time for the school session. Since the change of hours for freshmen in the high school was made, the time for ringing the signal for the forenoon session of all the schools was set at 7.15 o'clock, instead of 7.30 o'clock; the time for ringing the signal for suspension of the afternoon session is 12.45 o'clock, and for the evening session, 5.05 o'clock.

"The superintendent of schools believes in the use of the 'no-school' signal, although, at the same time, it is for him a most productious source of trouble and annoyance; on stormy days his office telephone and his home telephone, as well, are kept busy for approximately an hour, with inquiries as to whether the bell will ring or has been rung; furthermore, the wisest weather sharp who ever tried his skill on New England weather could not expect to make a perfect score, nor is it possible for any man, even if he had the wisdom of Solomon, to make universally satisfactory decisions. The superintendent of schools consults various of his learned friends when he is in doubt, uses his own judgment and lets the consequences take care of themselves.

"It must be remembered, however, that it is one thing to make an offhand decision as to the superintendent's judgment on the weather, and quite another thing to be the party of record who makes the decision.

"For several years the superintendent of schools has been making earnest suggestions as to the necessity of a centrally located signal, something in the nature of an electric siren, loud whenever there is uncertainty concerning it in its operation to be heard in all part of the city and above the noise of an ordinary storm; such a signal would cost very little for installation and very little for maintenance, and would free many homes from the necessity of calling on the telephone ing the 'no-school' signal."

The case came up in the local district court three weeks ago.

City Council Holds Meeting

the assistance of mothers with dependent children and the other $7500 for charity outdoor relief, the amount to be taken from the general treasury fund and placed to the credit of the funds named. The order was passed unanimously, as were all others at this meeting.

An order for the appropriation of $1000 for the election department for the current municipal year was next presented and passed.

An order was then presented for the appropriation of $5000 for the city hall fund. Commissioner Murphy said that the appropriation was an extraordinary one, as it would have been a simple matter at the beginning of the year to make the necessary provisions which would have obviated the necessity of this additional appropriation. He asked if any additional help had been employed, or if any raises in salary were contemplated.

Commissioner Marchand replied that he intended neither an increase of employes or an increase in salaries. There will be none, positively. He took a slash which he should not have taken when the budget was made up at the beginning of the year, and the heavy cost of coal and electric light made this extra money necessary.

Mr. Murphy expressed his satisfaction at Mr. Marchand's explanation, and the order passed.

The chairman announced that Mr. John A. Quinn had offered the highest price for the small tract of land adjoining the Jen ks school which the school committee authorized the council to sell, and the mayor was authorized to issue the deed for this property.

An order for the purchase of a motor driven, triple combination fire engine, not to exceed in cost the sum of $10,000, was introduced by Commissioner Sallner. The purchase is to be charged to the fund for "construction of fire engine house," and the new piece of fire apparatus, which is to have a special body, is to be constructed and assembled under the supervision of the commissioner of fire protection and the chief engineer of the fire department. The order was adopted, when upon adjournment was taken until next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Trading shifted to shippings, oils, motors and their specialties at the opening of today's stock market. United Fruit rose 1½ points, Mercantile Marine pfd., American International, Willis-Overland preferred, U. S. Rubber and Kelly-Springfield Tire also hardening. Standard Oil of New Jersey made an initial gain of two points and this soon was doubled, the California issue rising 2¾. Associated Drygoods was strongest of the specialties, advancing one point. Pressure against Union Pacific, New Haven and Westinghouse Electric caused fractional reverses in those issues.

The four and one-half per cent opening rate for call money encouraged a broadening of operations for the long account during the morning. Oils, tobaccos and leathers continued to be most favored, although rails, notably Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific, pfd., Great Northern pfd., and Norfolk & Western pfd. showed marked strength. Sears-Roebuck was the only distinctly weak issues, adding 1¾ points to yesterday's severe loss. Accumulation of United States government bonds on a large scale was uninterrupted, seven of those issues making new high records for the year. The first fours were the outstanding features, showing a gain of $1 per $100 at 97.00.

Market leaders, including rails, reacted at mid-day probably because of the increased weakness shown by specialties. Sears-Roebuck extended its decline to 3½ points and Harvester, Deere preferred Industrial Alcohol and Woolworth were 1 to 2 points lower.

In the final hour when call money rose to 6½ per cent, specialties were under further pressure but seasoned rails remained strong. The closing was irregular. Bonds were active and higher with many new maximums for government issues.

HEAVY DAMAGE ALONG COAST

Steamer Demock Forced Back to Port—Liner Cedric at Anchor

Wharves Inundated and Cellars Along Water Front Flooded

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The steamer H. F. Dimock today made an attempt to get away from this port for New York but ran into a snow storm in the outer harbor and put back.

The White Star liner Cretic with 800 passengers from Genoa, Naples and the Azores, arrived off Boston lightship, but the pilot boat was unable to get to her and she remained at anchor. The steamer Maryland also was held outside.

Wharves Inundated

An unusually high tide caused damage along the coast. In this city wharves were inundated and cellars along the water front flooded. At Brant Rock, Marshfield, the water topped the breakwater more than an hour before daylight and cottagers were obliged to retreat for shelter.

Worst in Years

Officials of public service corporations were unanimous in declaring the storm the worst in its effects that this section had known in years. The New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. described conditions as worse than yesterday. The Southern New Hampshire and Vermont belt was virtually cut off today. Thousands of individual lines in all sections were out of commission. The centers of telephone troubles was between Boston and oPrtsmouth, N. H., on the north and in Worceter county to the west.

Telegraph companies were accepting business for a limited number of cities and towns and then only subject to delay.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Co., which furnishes light and power for about 40 cities and towns in Greater Boston and the Malden Electric Co, held out little hope for general resumption of lighting service tonight.

At least three thousand telephone commission in outlying sections of the Boston Metropolitan district, according to an estimate by the state department of public utilities.

Damage to ornamental and shade trees throughout the state will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars in the opinion of Harold O. Cook, chief foreser in the state department of conservation.

George Gibbs of Wakefield died today of heart trouble which physicians said was due to over-exertion in battling the elements during a trip from Cambridge, where he was doing jury duty.

DEDICATE PORTICO OVER PLYMOUTH ROCK

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 29.—A new portico over Plymouth Rock, erected by the National Society of Colonial Dames in observance of the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims, was dedicated today. Because of the storm, all the exercises were held indoors at the First church, Unitarian.

GATHERING DATA ON WAITING ROOMS

Apropos the agitation for a waiting station in or near Merrimack square, the local chamber of commerce has started the gathering of data from other cities.

Last night, a number of questionnaires were sent out to cities and towns in this state, Connecticut and Rhode Island, to find out what the situation was in those different places. The places picked by the local chamber correspond to Lowell in makeup as nearly as is possible.

Heading the list of questions is a short introduction which tells of Lowell being without a waiting station for street railway patrons who wish to board cars in Merrimack square, the business and traffic centre of the city.

It goes on to say that the chamber of commerce has endeavored to secure the establishment of a waiting station, but as yet has not secured favorable results. The railway company claims that the waiting station was abolished as a means of economy because it could not afford to pay the rent asked.

The general introduction ends up with: "The general public wants a waiting station. We would like your help by answers to the following questions:

Have you a street railway "waiting room" in your city or town?

How is it provided; in co-operation with a store or separately?

Is it open all year? What hours daily?

Rent paid for "waiting room" by railway? (Approximate amount if exact figures are not obtainable.)

Is the "waiting station" an old or a recent accommodation?

If you have no "waiting room," what steps are being taken to get one?

What street railway or railways operate in your city or town?

Any other facts would be appreciated.

Fishermen and Life Saving Men Safe After Fight With Heavy Seas

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 29.—Buffeted about by heavy seas for 60 hours, saved from destruction and death from the rockbound coast by using their nets as a drag-anchor with a final safe entry into port, yesterday afternoon, is the experience of five fishermen on board the 40-foot mackerel-dragging boat Filomena out of Gloucester. No less harrowing was the experience of five members of the United States coast guard station 23, sent out with a smaller open boat to search, in the heaviest storm reported along the Atlantic coast in more than two years.

The Filomena having for a crew Dominic Orlando, Frank Orlando, Michael Orlando, Cabista Lafata and Benny Randazzo put off Saturday morning for Cape Ann. Equipped with a 24-H. P. engine the craft was sent near Halibut Point, two miles north of Thatcher's Island. Thirty nets were cast. After a day's fishing hauling was begun at 5.30 o'clock Saturday night. They were last seen by Antonio Frontiero and his crew of three men, who were told that after three more nets had been pulled in the Filomena was ready for port.

When on yesterday afternoon the boat failed to reach port fear was expressed for her safety. Heavy seas were pounding the coast line. Frontiero sent out an alarm. Charlestown navy yard was notified and radios were sent out being picked up at Rockport, Provincetown and other stations including the station at Dolliver's Neck. There was a misunderstanding at first. One report said there was a steamer ashore on Thatcher's Island. Another had it that a boat containing 40 men had foundered. Still another stated it was a 40-foot power boat.

Instructions were flashed to prepare for a search. Captain F. E. Aubin taking for his crew Bosun's Mate H. Acker, Engineer S. R. Orr, F. K. Martin and W. E. Johnson launched the lifeboat and started combing the seas. For six hours they patrolled and were forced in because of darkness.

At daybreak Monday morning they resumed their search. This was undertaken under appalling conditions. In the thick of one of the worst storms encountered by mariners in two years the small craft met with an assault from gale and sea during its approximately 40-mile trip that left its occupants more than grateful for a safe return.

Orlando, in explaining his absence, said that while hauling his nets, the flywheel of the engine came off and the craft was disabled. The boat drifted while the men attempted to repair the damage. They were nearing Halifax Point where they realized the peril of being crashed on the rocks. They were unable to land. They could do little in the darkness of the night but worked all Sunday and kept a sharp lookout for passing craft.

Finally the wheel was replaced and the craft started for port with the crew suffering from hunger and exposure. She tied up at the fort at 12.30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

SENSATIONAL SCANDAL IN RUM RUNNING

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 29.—Some of the sensational scandal of rum running involving two or three murders, was disclosed yesterday by the amazing testimony, unemotionally uttered by the state's witnesses in opening the bribery and blackmail trial of Albert A. Greenberg, prosecutor of the New Britain police court.

The chief witness against Greenberg yesterday was Salvatore Varcola of Southington, also in jail awaiting trial for confessed extensive bootlegging.

For the first time since the law was enacted last spring, the accused elected to dispense with a jury and have the judge hear and pass on both law and fact.

The specific charges against Greenberg are that in June, 1920, he blackmailed Varcola and Edward C. Denison, a New Britain garage man, who admitted rum running from New York, and that Greenberg accepted a $125 bribe from Varcola, who testified that he finally got back only $125 out of $500 paid for the recovery of a stolen load of whiskey by Dennison, who, according to Varcola, had to split with Richardson.

Several times yesterday, the testimony involved Emil Rinaldino, a bootlegger, found murdered months ago, and evidence introduced indicated that state police detectives are looking up the prohibition violations and corruptions with the Rinaldino and Jacob Winkle murders.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(By the Associated Press)—President Harding's suggestion for a continuing conference of nations is expected by administration officials to become the subject of formal discussion before the present conference ends.

A SPLASH OF COLOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Occasionally a splash of color against the blackness of the model!

Orange velvet in long straight lines, high throat and fur waist band give this Poiret gown a quite distinctive charm.

The skirt, a trifle full, ventures nearly to the ankles. The bodice, exquisitely plain and slit at the top front to show a fascinating bit of white throat, is ornamented with a strand of pearls.

Embroidered panel effects flare a trifle over the hips.

The hat—another enlivening touch—is red velvet.

MISS FRAZER AT WOMEN'S CLUB

Middlesex Women's Club Members Hear One of Britain's Noted Women Orators

Sidelights on Personalities in British Politics—England's Naval Policy

Miss Helen Frazer, one of Britain's foremost women orators, addressed the Middlesex Women's club at its weekly meeting yesterday, and despite a rather small attendance, due to the adverse weather conditions, the lecture was one of the most interesting of the season. Miss Frazer addressed the club some three years ago on War Work, and her subject yesterday was "Some Personalities in British Politics," a subject she should be very familiar with, since she is soon to return to stand for parliament.

Miss Frazer first spoke of the various parties existing in England, and the events which led up to the formation of the coalition ministry during the war. Just now, she said, it is felt in England that Lloyd George's party has too large a majority. She thought that Americans would not understand this policy, but the English felt that well-organized and powerful opposition acted as a restraint on the party in control.

She discussed Lloyd George's personality at length and interestingly. She dwelt on his charm of manner, and his ability to win others to his point of view. He has a very real sense of humor and gets the best of his enemies through ridicule.

She described Arthur Balfour as the rare man who could come nearest attaining tao Kipling's poem, "If." She gave illustrations of his extreme abstraction.

Winston Churchill has a half-dozen personalities, according to the speaker, and is a brilliant, but not a reliable, leader.

She said that Austin Chamberlain suffered from having a brilliant father. He himself is not an altogether arresting figure.

Asquith is a cold speaker, but has great ability in choosing words and stating a case. He is not a great leader, lacking driving force, and has been hurmed greatly by his wife's book.

She explained the status of the "wild men" of the labor party and the anti-waste candidates of the Northcliffe group.

The advent of women members of parliament was taken up by the speaker. There are two of these at present, one of them the former-American, Lady Astor, described as very witty and brilliant, and possessing moral courage which allows her to say whatever she wishes. Both these women took over their husbands' places, and the goal at present is to send in women whose husbands have not preceded them, thus avoiding entangling alliances.

Speaking briefly on the Irish question, she said England does not state her side of the case in this country because they do not want to make the United States a battleground for her problems. She asserted, however, that the whole country was united in the resolve that the union should not be broken. They take the same view as Lincoln did relative to the dissolution of the union in this country, and said that our country was a shining example of the doctrine that people of many nations and creeds can live together harmoniously under one flag. They intend, however, to be as lenient and generous toward Ireland as possible. Accession to Ireland's demands would speedily lead to demands of a similar nature from Egypt and India. She said that she hoped for a satisfactory solution of the Irish question.

She spoke of England's naval policy, saying that there was never a right by divine command to rule the seas, but the British navy had often served to protect the peace of the world. The British dominions possessed a greater extent of coast line than the United States. The fact that her country is now willing to see our navy as great as its own is proof of absolute trust. There is a mutual distaste for aggressive action.

She expressed a belief that the present conferences in Washington will lead to a better understanding between the two countries, and the achievements of this will be a great step forward in the task of world betterment and the good of civilization in the future.

BIG MASS MEETING

Great Reception Planned for Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan, Envoy of Irish Republic

Last night the committee of arrangements for the reception to Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan of Roscommon, Ireland, at Associate hall, held a conference and made final arrangements for the public mass meeting tonight. It was felt that it should be postponed on account of the weather, but this is impracticable because Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan's time is limited, and his speaking dates are fixed ahead.

The meeting will be opened promptly at 8 o'clock with musical selections after which the distinguished speaker will be presented to deliver his message from Ireland. He is the vice president of the Sinn Fein organization and as a clergyman he can hold no political office.

The leaders of the Irish movement on this side of the Atlantic would not be surprised to hear of a settlement of the Irish question before Lloyd George sails for this country on Saturday, Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan will tell what will happen if the trouble is not settled and if England allows Ulster to frustrate the aims of the London conference. The meeting is free to the public and all friends of the cause are invited.

TODAY'S DOINGS IN THE DISTRICT COURT

George Burney, of this city, given his freedom from the house of correction at Cambridge last Saturday, was rearrested for drunkenness by Officer Aldrich on Middlesex street early Sunday morning and sent back to that institution for three months by John J. Pickman in district court today. George pleaded not guilty and strongly denied he was under the influence of liquor, although he admitted he had been given two drinks by a friend Saturday night. Officer Aldrich testified that he sent Burney home shortly after midnight Sunday, but that the defendant refused to go and reappeared on Middlesex street at 1.30 o'clock.

When quizzed by Deputy Downey regarding a fine he was given some months ago the accused admitted having only paid half of a $15 assessment, this due, he said, to the fact that he "wasn't given a chance."

"I was rearrested and sent to the house of correction before I had a chance to pay the rest," George said.

Train delay occasioned by the severe storm necessitated a postponement of the larceny cases against David Lyons, Harry Pennington, William Sennett and Joseph Conroy, all of Lowell, and Placid Cormier of Cambridge. The first four are charged with stealing 94 and a half yards of cloth valued at $120 from Fred Mathews, of Somerville, in Billerica Oct. 5.

The police allege Cormier stole 24 and a half yards of cloth valued at $85 from the same person at the same time. The case has been called several times but at the request of counsel for one or the other of the persons involved continuances have each time been asked. Trial is now set for Dec. 7.

A plea of not guilty was entered by counsel representing Charles F. Graham, charged with a statutory offense, but the case was continued to Saturday.

STORM STEMS TIDE OF ARRESTS HERE

The stormy weather is having good effect on drunks, the police believe. Since shortly after midnight Sunday, not a single arrest for drunkenness was made. In fact since that time only one person was taken in custody, and that on a warrant charging a statutory offense.

Now what the officers would like to know is whether the storm is keeping habitual moonshine indulgers from drinking or is it merely preventing their appearance in public?

Wife of Postmaster Passed Away Yesterday Afternoon at St. John's Hospital

The many friends of Mrs. Nellie Veronica (Little) Meehan, beloved wife of Postmaster John F. Meehan, will be pained to learn of her death which occurred at St. John's hospital, yesterday afternoon.

Deceased was well and favorably known throughout the city and, because of her cheerful disposition and genial manner, was genuinely loved and admired by her many friends. She had a sweetness of thought and kindness of expression that attracted people to her and cemented friendships on every hand. She enjoyed the company of her many acquaintances and many a burden was lifted by the sympathy that her eyes as well as her words expressed. However, pneumonia developed about ten days ago and steadily she grew worse until the end came peacefully, shortly before 4.30 p.m., yesterday.

Mrs. Meehan was active in the affairs of St. Patrick's, church and a zealous member of the Holy Family sodality of that parish. Before her marriage she was employed for several years as bookkeeper for the C. G. Coburn Co., in Pawtucketville, and, as in the various circles in which she moved, was a general favorite with business men and others with whom she came in contact. She was a typical exemplification of American womanhood, a beautiful wife and a kind and gracious neighbor.

Besides her husband, she leaves her mother, Mrs. Catherine (King) Little; four brothers, Edwin J., manager of the Proctor Cooke Co., Charles, Frederick and Paul, all of Lowell, and two sisters, Mrs. Francis J. Murphy and Mrs. Walter S. Flynn, also of this city.

AVOID THE DANGER ZONE

Public Warned to Keep Safe Distance From Fallen or Sagging Wires

(Special to The Sun)

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—A warning to the public, to keep at a safe distance from fallen or sagging wires, was issued yesterday by Col. Alfred F. Foote, state commissioner of public safety.

Not only should actual contact with such wires be avoided, the commissioner points out, but they should not even be approached by those not familiar with their handling. Water and ice are ready conductors of electricity, and if high tension wires have fallen in a pool of water, it is difficult to tell just how far their effects may be felt.

"The western, central and northern portions of the state," Col. Foote says in his statement, "have a large number of high tension lines distributing power from hydro-electric plants to manufacturing centres and local electric companies' transformer stations. Most of these lines carry in excess of 10,000 volts and while they are practically all run over private lands, frequently they run parallel to and across public highways.

"In addition, a large number of cables of mains running on poles in the streets of cities and towns are carrying current from 1,300 to 2,300 volts. As a result of the storm, wires, poles and insulators in many localities, particularly north and west of Boston, are heavily coated with ice and many have collapsed under the strain. Water and ice are ready conductors of electricity. Care should be exercised in the vicinity of a high tension or distributing line in touching or coming in contact with poles, hanging wires or anything that is wet where there is a possibility of its having contact with the line. There is a possibility of trees wooden fences and poles being heavily charged without the breaking of any of the wires, through leakage in the current passing around the insulators.

"It is urged that only those familiar with the danger attending such circumstances and whose business it is to deal with existing conditions be permitted to handle broken or sagging wires or come in contact with articles likely to be heavily charged with electricity."

SIDEWALKS AND SNOW

Police Will See to it That Sidewalks Are Made Passable

Aiming to keep sidewalks free of snow and slush having in mind the safety of the general public, Supt. of Police Redmond Welch today stated that he expects storekeepers, business houses, house owners throughout the city to comply with the city regulations which provide that sidewalks shall be cleared within 24 hours after a storm has ceased.

"We don't expect to have people go out and shovel the snow or slush off their sidewalks while a storm is in progress," the chief said, "but soon as the snow or sleet stops falling storekeepers, business firms, superintendents of office buildings, janitors and others, must see to it that their sidewalks are cleaned off and made safe for the public to walk on. The law states that such a precaution be taken no later than 24 hours after the storm's abatement and the police will see to it that this regulation is enforced. It is for the protection of the citizens in general that we ask this ordinance be complied with."

The chief was pleased that many firms in the business district shoveled off the snow and sleet of yesterday and this morning.

LIQUOR OFFICERS MAKE GOOD FIREMEN

Armed with a search warrant for booze and distilling apparatus, Officers Cossette and Kenney of the police liquor squad and Federal Officer Sheldon swooped down on a 24-family tenement house on Elm street late yesterday afternoon in time to check what would probably have been a serious fire.

Today they are making every effort to apprehend a man who, according to the police version, was working at the gas meter in the cellar, having it partially disconnected for the purpose of connecting the gas-piping with a 35 gallon still all set up ready for operation the moment gas was supplied it. Amidst the fumes caused by an explosion of gas when the man broke the pipe connections at the meter the officers lost track of the alleged offender, who, it is thought, escaped through the cellar window.

As the officers opened the door leading to the cellar from the first floor, they were met by a flash of flame and a strong odor of gas fumes. Immediately a call to the fire department was sent and, realizing that gas had caused the fire, the officers shut off the gas from the outside. They warned the family on the first floor who were unaware of the fire in the basement until the officers had opened the cellar door. Examination showed, the police say, that the pipe had been disconnected from the meter and a new piping system arranged, the pipe leading to the still set up in a small compartment in a corner of the cellar. The "plumber" was working by the light of a candle, it is stated, and when he unloosened the pipe without having first shut off the gas, an explosion took place which immediately started a fire. The prompt arrival of the fire apparatus confined the blaze to the basement. The firemen had difficulty in entering the cellar and were forced to don gas masks. The wooden boards against which the meter and gas pipes were laid were burned and a pile of rubbish also caught fire, but the blazes were extinguished before any serious damage could be done.

When the smoke had cleared away the police in a more rigid search of the basement located besides the still three five gallon jugs containing a small amount of moonshine and 50 bottles of Jamaica ginger stored in a small, bricked room, newly whitewashed, where the distillery was evidently to be operated.

It is believed that the timely arrival of the police averted what might have turned out to be a serious catastrophe as the tenement block is thickly inhabited, there being many small children in the 24 homes, the police say.

In the early evening the squad visited a house on Gorham street, where they confiscated a 10-gallon still, a quantity of moonshine and 75 gallons of mash, and another tenement block in Elm street where on one floor they found nine barrels containing a small amount of mash.

DIRSA IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

John Dirsa and Alexander Santriana, of Lawrence, were held in $1000 bail for the grand jury by Judge J. J. Mahoney in the Lawrence district court yesterday. The two young men, who are said to have become "pals" while serving terms in state prison at Cranston, R. I., are accused of robbing Titus Romanofsky, a Lawrence storekeeper, of $50 while he was entering his home late on the night of October 29. Dirsa, who is a brother-in-law of the plaintiff, came to Lowell and after a search of several days by the local police was arrested on Middlesex street by Officer Maloney five days after the alleged robbery.

HERO OF LOST BATTALION DEAD

Col. Whittlesey Ends Life on Steamer Toloa, While on Way to Havana

Brooding Over Memories of His Experiences in War Ascribed as Cause of Act

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Secret brooding over the memories of his experience in the great war, from which he emerged one of America's greatest individual heroes, was ascribed today by friends and relatives of Lieut. Col. Charles W. Whittlesey as the cause of his taking his life Sunday while on the way to Havana.

Leaving several letters, presumably explaining his act, the commander of the "Lost Battalion" disappeared from the steamship Toloa, 24 hours out from New York. His intimate friends had no idea he was making an ocean voyage.

Spirit Shaken By Memories

Members of his family and close business associates were incredulous at first when a wireless despatch reported him missing. Then they began to recall incidents which, pieced together, might have been recognized as indications that his spirit was shaken by the recurrent memories of his brothers-in-arms who had died before his eyes in France.

The last blow they said, more trying than the rest, was in Washington a fortnight ago when Col. Whittlesey took part in the funeral services for America's unknown soldier. He returned from the capital more depressed than ever. There he had met hundreds of former friends and had marked anew the gaps in the ranks of the men he loved.

"His Mind Stopped"

"His mind stopped," was the explanation of Robert Forsyth Little, of the law firm of White & Case with which Col. Whittlesey had been associated for about a year.

"It had all it could bear, remarkable mind though it was."

"For the last two years there has scarcely been an hour when the grief and horror of the war was not brought vividly and specifically before him."

Col. Whittlesey had told no one, apparently, that he was going to Havana. When he left his office Friday afternoon, it was with some cheery remark regarding the Army-Navy football game, which he indicated he intended to see.

At his boarding house on East 44th street, he told friends he was going away "to be by myself—to rest," when he left Saturday morning with a traveling bag.

Leaped Into Fame

Col. Whittlesey's name leaped into prominence over night through his retort to the German officer who called upon him to surrender after he was surrounded in the Argonne.

For four days and nights his command, the First Battalion, 308th Infantry, 77th division, had lain under fire, cut off from aid, without food or fresh water. All but 57 men had been killed or wounded.

Blindfolded and under the protection of a white flag, a German soldier stumbled into the American strong point.

"Surrender," he cried, "in the name of humanity," and he told how from the German trenches, the agonized cries of the American wounded could be heard. But his message to the enemy was not that he would lay down his arms.

Told Germans Where to Go

"You go to hell," he said.

A few hours later, American reserves attacked all along the line. The Germans were pushed back and the little band of survivors saved.

On his return to the United States he was voted the Congressional Medal of Honor, the most coveted American decoration for heroism, and a few months after the armistice, the German officer who called on him to surrender, made a public statement, extolling the courage and dogged determination of his former foe.

MORATORIUM FOR GERMANY PREPARED

LONDON, Nov. 29. (By the Associated Press)—Rumors of a proposed moratorium for Germany are revived by the Daily Mail, which reported that Sir John Bradbury, British delegate on the reparations commission has drafted a memorandum on the subject for the consideration of the cabinet.

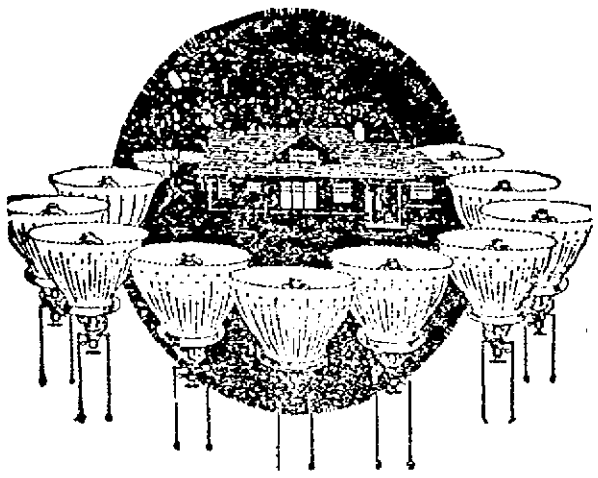

The newspaper says that as a result, the cabinet may urge a moratorium on Germany's debts to the allies of two or three years, on condition that she cease manufacturing currency.

Dr. Walter Rathenau, former German minister of reconstruction, and Dr. Walter Simons, former foreign minister, arrived in London today and it is surmised that their visit is connected with the reparations question. Baron Edgar d'Arbernon, British ambassador to Germany, is also here.

40 WITNESSES FOR PROSECUTION

Rebuttal Testimony Order of Day at Reopening of Arbuckle Trial Today

Mrs. Fox, Close Friend of Miss Rappe, Among Chief Witnesses

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Rebuttal testimony was the order of the day at the reopening of the Roscoe Arbuckle manslaughter trial today. The district attorney's office after a conference of all those engaged in the prosecution announced that about 40 witnesses would be heard.

Arbuckle's own story of the events at a party he gave in his suite in the Hotel St. Francis here, at which the prosecution contends he caused fatal injuries to Miss Virginia Rappe, was given to the jury yesterday. In substance, he said, he found her ill and did everything in his power to allay her suffering. Cross-examination failed to make him change any detail of his description.

Among witnesses on the prosecution's list for today was Mrs. Catherine Fox of Chicago, a close friend of Miss Rappe. It was intimated she would testify that Miss Rappe's health was good. The defense has contended a chronic ailment caused her death.

NO SCHOOL TODAY

Again today the schools of the city are closed, on account of the bad walking and the ravages of the storm on electric light wires, and Supt. The superintendent also stated that pupils of the continuation schools, who ordinarily are not governed by the "no school" signal, would be excused for absenting themselves today.

Electric Light Customers

The unavoidable necessity of advising our customers that several sections of the territory and many homes we serve will be without electric light service possibly for several days or much longer is most deeply regretted.

Everything possible is being done to restore electric service.

All of our former EXPERIENCED line employees are volunteering their help and are already augmenting our regular crew.

Extreme courtesy has been shown us by the electric light companies at Lynn, Fall River, New Bedford and Brockton by permitting crews of their EXPERIENCED linemen voluntarily to come to Lowell during our great difficulty. Great credit is due these experienced linemen themselves for voluntarily leaving their own work to come to help us during these severe conditions.

At noon today weather conditions continue fully as unfavorable.

So far all that can be done is to clear wires and poles broken down by falling trees. This will continue until completed and until pleasant weather returns.

Our regular line employees and other regular employees assigned to this work are absolutely loyal, unsparing of comfort and energy, and are doing most commendable work during long hours daily.

You are earnestly requested to appreciate the severe conditions existing.

We express sincere appreciation of and thanks for the helpful kindness evidenced by many Lowell business organizations who have offered assistance, also to so many of our customers who invariably have been sympathetic when reporting their inconvenience to this office.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 29.—Four armed robbers early today raided the residence of William Cooper Proctor, president of the Proctor & Gamble Co., in Glendale, a suburb, forced the three women members of the household, who were alone in the house, to become prisoners in the cellar and then ransacked the home, escaping with jewelry, according to the police valued at more than $100,000.

The robbers escaped in an automobile.

RECOUNT MAKES LITTLE CHANGE

With six wards completed at an early hour this afternoon only slight changes were noted in the mayoralty recount. O'Sullivan gained 11, Brown gained 8, Thompson gained 8, Scott lost 10, Donovan gained 10, Mignault lost 15, Donnelly lost 13 and blanks lost 6, in the 18 precincts counted. A clerical error in one precinct lost ten votes for Mignault, and other slight slips kept the candidates seesawing as the precincts were counted.

Chairman McOsker stated that the commissioners are working hard to finish the count today, and it would be no fault of theirs if they were unsuccessful. He says "the worst is yet to come," referring to the recount for school committee.

Worst Icy Visitation in Memory of the City's Oldest Residents

Gigantic Task Ahead for Public Service Companies and Others

Gallantly struggling against heavy odds with every ounce of energy that ingenious humanity can muster to the rallying call of a sorely tried people, and with all the great public service corporations staggering under the most severe blows and heaviest burdens of one of the most destructive breakdowns ever known in this vicinity, with many homes, stores and meeting places still entirely cut off from lighting and telephone service and railway transportation still greatly hampered, Lowell is this afternoon renewing its valiant struggle with increased energy and more determination than ever to hit the high road back to normal conditions and put the Spindle City back on the map.

Conditions all over the city show no great improvement over those reported late last evening, although much headway is being made in some of the outlying sections of the city, where there is far better street car service and more power and telephone wires in a renewed condition. The havoc of the storm has, nevertheless, handicapped the service corporations because of its great duration, and the city of Lowell in many sections will be again without lights tonight, and there is no telling when the telephone wires will be working again in the outside districts.

All-Night Blockade

One of the worst disasters of the storm suffered by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company occurred late yesterday afternoon on Bridge street, Centralville, when two enormous limbs of a big elm tree

BY JAMES W. DEAN

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—There is a slump in the movie industry. Many within the industry thought that it would end with the passing of summer. The past summer was the worst season the business has known.

Business has picked up some since amusement parks and outdoor attractions have been closed, but it is not yet up to the standard of previous autumns and winters.

Movie houses in all parts of the country are closing.

This condition results from high admission prices to motion picture theatres, that and nothing else.

When the admission price is lowered more people will attend the picture theatres. The total receipts will be higher. The industry will be more prosperous.

There is evidence aplenty that too much is being charged for admission to movies. In some places in the southwest patrons of theaters are given charge accounts. They go to see a movie and pay when they get the money.

Business slumped at a $300,000 theater in Brooklyn. The manager brought the price down to ten cents. Then he charged one cent for the second admission. In other words, two for eleven cents.

Why are movie admissions high? Exhibitors are little to blame. Many of them are conducting business at a loss.

The main factor in keeping movie admissions at the present level is the high salaries being paid to stars. In some cases rentals of films are not in proportion to the cost of production.

This writer has information at first hand that one film actor who has been featured in only a few films and received $500 a week for one of his recent pictures, asked five times that amount for his next picture.

Much of the blame for high rentals of pictures also rests upon the shoulders of the producers and distributors. Some of the foreign films prove that. They were bought for a song, comparing their cost to the cost of pictures made in this country.

Were rentals for those pictures lowered? Were admission prices to see them lowered? Not by a jug full!

In some cases the prices to see foreign films were advanced beyond the usual admission prices!

The day of the nickelodeon and the ten-cent picture undoubtedly is past. The public demands better pictures than can profitably be shown at those prices!

However, pictures are not five to ten times better than they were when admissions were one-tenth to one-fifth of what they now are.

The motion picture industry will continue to be in a chaotic state until it is run on the same basis as other industries, a certain percentage of profit on the capital invested with a sane scale of salaries to players who make the pictures.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

At B. F. Keith's theatre this week, two of vaudeville's most versatile entertainers, J. Francis Dooley and Corinne Sayles, former stars of "Monte Cristo, Jr.," hold the star position on the bill, and their spontaneous comedy, witty dialog and eccentric and clever dancing aroused the audiences at both performances yesterday to enthusiasm and uncontrollable laughter. This renowned team has not visited Lowell for several seasons and has returned with one of the most amusing skits seen in a local theatre for many a day.

Mr. Dooley not only performed many stunts, both unusual and mirth-provoking, but starred as an orator, telling his audiences of previous visits to Lowell in the old days when musical extravaganza first became the rage. Miss Sayles was not only pleasing to the eye but proved an excellent dancer and singer, and held up her end of the rapid-fire repartee in a most capable manner. The audiences were compelled to exercise their wits to the utmost to grasp the extemporaneous quirks injected by this skilful pair.

Sonia Baraban and Charles C. Grohs, featuring "Aztec Indian Love," are two of the best interpretative dancers ever seen here. Opening with a Chinese scene, with excellent costuming and symbolic dancing, the pair shift quickly to a modern melange of fancy dancing, appropriately costumed. "Aztec Indian Love," with both artists attired in the ancient costume of the famous Indian race, was featured by an Apache dance, with Miss Baraban and Mr. Grohs presenting an artistic conception of this barbaric ceremony.

Raymond Bond, as an embryo salesman of women's wear, and Miss Eleanor Magnuson, as a sophisticated buyer in a New York department store, present a quaint and heart-intriguing comedy skit. The extraordinary efforts of the unskilled but determined salesman to beat down the flinty reserve of the buyer not only wins the sympathy of the audience, but interests it in his cause to an unusual degree and the buyer's final capitulation pleases it immensely. Miss Magnuson and Mr. Bond act their respective parts excellently, and deserve the applause which greets their efforts.

The Bowman brothers, the "Blue Grass boys," are black-face comedians of the best type, and their songs and repartee are well received. Peggy Carhart, concert violinist, formerly with the Cleveland Symphony orchestra, plays her instrument exquisitely and made an excellent impression yesterday. Daley, Mac and Daley have a spectacular roller-skating act hard to equal, with excellent comedy interwoven. Nestor and Vincent offer a unique balancing act, introducing many novelties.

A travelog on "Rio Janiero," Topics of the Day, and a modernized Aesop's fable open the bill, and the Pathe News weekly, showing scenes in the United States and England, is the closing number.

THE STRAND THEATRE

It is seldom that Mary Pickford and her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, appear on the same bill at the same theatre, but this is what is happening at the Strand theatre the first three days of the week. Mary is being featured in a delightful melodrama entitled "Through the Back Door," while Fairbanks holds the title role in a very pleasing comedy, "The Nut."

Mary is charming in the part of Jeanne, the daughter of a rich American woman, who is being reared by the wife of a Belgian farmer. Jeanne is brought up on the farm and is contented with her surroundings. She grows into womanhood and is made to believe that she is really the daughter of the peasant woman. When the war breaks out, she is given a passport and is sent to America to her real mother, but despite her efforts she is unable to convey the glad news of her arrival to the one who loves her and who has given her up for dead. Finally, she secures employment at the home of her mother as a maid and later the happy reunion occurs. The play is one of the best produced by Mary in a long time.

In "The Nut," Fairbanks is given another opportunity to show his skill as an athlete, for while impersonating a young man with inventive ideas, whose sole object is to win the admiration of the girl he loves, he goes through a series of stunts that are amazing. The romance in the play is splendidly disposed of and the happy ending is brought about very logically when the young man rescues the girl from a gambling den to which she has been lured by the villain.

The weekly comedy is good and the current events, which include the Harvard-Yale football game and other interesting scenes in various parts of the world, are very pleasing. The musical numbers are also enjoyable.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

For real human interest, pathos and an example of mother love, the picture, "Over the Hill," featuring Mary Carr, now playing at the Merrimack Square theatre, is wonderfully complete. It is doubtful if ever a picture carried a more lifelike reproduction of the trials and tribulations a mother will endure for her children than the picture which last night started a seven days' run.

Mary Carr is depicted as the mother of six children, who, save one, her son, John, forget the simple teachings of the bible, especially the fourth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother." Miss Carr is the whole show and dominates every scene from the beginning to the end. Supporting her is John Walker, cast as her son, Johnny.

The prelude to the story shows Miss Carr as Ma Benton raising a family of four boys and two girls under the handicap of a good-for-nothing husband, who overestimates the value of his manual services and in consequence refuses to work.

A scene showing three of the boys, Isaac, Charley and Johnny at school is very realistic. Charley draws a cartoon of the teacher on the blackboard and blames it on to Johnny. As a forerunner of what is to come, Johnny takes all blame and also the whipping that goes with it. His childhood sweetheart meets him at the door of the school and comforts him, again showing what is to come.

Here the prelude ends and after a lapse of several years the children have all grown up, married and left the old home. Johnny again proves the exception and stays at home to aid his mother. Reunions are held in which a widening breach is made between Johnny and his now hypocritical brother, Isaac.

Johnny, too, decides to leave but the night before his departure he catches his father in the act of stealing horses. He saves his father, takes the blame and is sent to prison for three years. While Johnny is in jail the father dies of a broken heart and the mother, left alone in the little town of Fairfield, Conn., waits for him. He comes back from prison and determines to start west to make his fortune. Before going he makes his brother Isaac promise to care for their mother. He sends money from time to time for her care but Isaac appropriates the money for his own use. The poor mother, buffeted from one child's home to the other, is forced to go to the poor house.

To surprise his mother Johnny returns from Oregon on Mothers' Day, severely beats his brother, Isaac, and drags him nearly to the poor house where the mother is found, now a withered old lady, on her hands and knees scrubbing floors for her keep.

Johnny brings the mother home to a surprise, for his sweetheart has fixed her old home up for her again. The children, humble and ashamed, return for forgiveness and like a mother she forgives all.

The play is staged under the direction of Harry Millarde and produced from Will Carleton's famous poem. The settings are ideal and show much originality in construction.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

The ravages of the storm king which held the city in its grip all day yesterday and departed leaving a trail of snow and ice-covered streets and traffic blockades in its wake did not prevent the patrons of the Lowell Opera House from flocking to that popular playhouse last evening for the first presentation in this city of the highly dramatic and gripping melodrama, "Why Girls Leave Home." The theatre on Gorham street was crowded, and wonderful as it may seem to those not able to be present and see the splendid performance, practically every seat was filled before the curtain arose at 8.15. It was an admirable performance in every way, the story revealed was one of the most unusual ever offered by the Lowell Players for the edification of patrons, old and new, and the cast most congenial and well chosen from "leads" to "supers," was entirely capable.

This realistic drama of life today has five acts, each staged in the usual Opera House manner with splendid attention to minute details. The story is unusual, the various roles requiring deep study and preparation, and the opening performance last night was well worth going to see.

The tale is one that throbs with interest from start to finish. Miss Shirley Magrath, as Pearl Sherwood, in the lead, proved once again her admirable talent. Her work reached high perfection in the tragical scenes and the role is one that must tax any actress who aims as high as this popular Lowell favorite. Kalman Matus, as Samuel Stone, Pearl's faithful lover, had a difficult role, although he has had far better ones in some other plays. His performance, nevertheless, was smooth and captivating, as it always is. He made the ideal lover whose faith in the girl he loved never wavered.

The story unfolded shows the luring of a country girl to the city, where she is duped and led to drinking dens by clever accomplices, male and female. Warned that the fashionable young city man was not sincere, the country maid, beautiful, innocent and high-strung, wanted to live her own life. Her innocence brought her into peculiar situations, which aroused her devoted relatives, including a loving brother who, although addicted to drink, attempted to protect her. Finding the girl in the city after a long search, the brother attempted to induce the girl to return home. There was a quarrel, and the girl defied him. The brother declared, in the frenzy of the moment, that he would kill the girl before he would allow her to return to the snare set for her by evil companions, and in a battle royal between brother and sister, the former struck the girl down with a pair of fireside tongs. Believing that he had killed her, he declared he was ready to die. The police were not notified of the supposed tragedy until the girl, who had not been slain, had been spirited away by a girl from the tenderloin who loved the girl's brother and who had been discarded. Kept in a prison-like room unknown to the police, who received reports of an actual murder, the girl was a prisoner for six months. In the meantime, her brother was tried for murder and sentenced to hang. The girl's final escape from the clutches of her captors, her appearance at the prison just as her brother was about to be led to the gallows, was one of the most thrilling episodes unfolded by the players.

Besides the notable work of the "leads," Mr. Matus and Miss Magrath, Clarence Chase, as Johnny Hobbins, gave a splendid performance in the role of the youth in love but slightly afraid of getting into trouble until his nerve returned and made him thrash the villain for a fare-thee-well. Miss Marion Coogan as Minnie Sherwood, gave her usual finished performance; Miss Ollie Minall was splendidly cast in the mother's role of Mrs. Sherwood; Richard Castilla as Joseph White, also proved once more his value as a stock company artist of high rank. One of the strongest characters and one that was taken in a most convincing manner was that of Dan Sherwood, with Seth Arnold in the role. Arnold's work last evening was one of the strongest "cards" in the deck of stock characters. Nothing like it has been seen at the Opera House before for some time. Jay Strong appeared as George Hodge, James L. Wood was well placed as Kelly, Miss Mabel Griffith gave her usual fine performance as Dolly Fletcher of the tenderloin. Miss Griffith's work is growing in popularity right along. She made an attractive figure last evening in several thrilling scenes and showed excellent taste in dressing for the role. John Ruvold appeared as Mr. Tiddler in a short appearance but one that gave him a good opportunity to display his varied talents; Frank Joyce had the role of Boab and Hal Stack, as captain of police, gave one of the best performances he has ever furnished. A clever role and refreshing in every way was that of Sadie Dillock, taken by Miss Coralind Hazard, whose work was very pleasing. The singing and dancing of the Kelly sisters in the cabaret scene was a novel feature.

RIALTO THEATRE

Merit attaches to the whole production of "Playthings of Destiny," the Associated First National pictures attraction which opened a three day engagement at the Rialto theatre yesterday afternoon. Seldom has such a dramatic story been told so skilfully on the screen and rarely has the author hit upon a series of instances so certain to hold the interest of an audience right up to the very end.

Anita Stewart is the leading star in this production and in the characterization of a backwoods school teacher who became the wife of two noted English diplomats, she adds one more to her list of dramatic successes. An equally good cast supports Miss Stewart and succeed in rounding out a well balanced and attractive screen production.

On the same program at the Rialto, for the first three days of the week, is Blanche McGarity in a strong production, "Love's Redemption." Also an Education comedy and the Kinograms.

The story of "Playthings of Destiny" opens in the Canadian backwoods, where a school teacher, "Julie Lancau," becomes the bride of Geoffrey Arnold after a short acquaintance. Her happiness is rudely shattered one day, by the arrival of a woman who claimed to be Geoffrey's wife, and broken by the thought that her husband had deceived her, she leaves home in a terrible blizzard and becomes lost to her husband and the searching party who sought her everywhere.

In her new sphere Julie is thrown into the acquaintance of "Herbert Randolph," who is snowbound in a north woods cabin while on a diplomatic mission for his English government. She accepts the generosity of his hospitable home and, in time, accepts his proposal of marriage, believing that her former marriage to Arnold is void. They leave the north for Jamaica, where her new husband is sent on another diplomatic mission and, in his ambition to become governor general of Jamaica, he invites one "Lord Stanhope" to his home. Stanhope proves to be none other than Julie's first husband. A series of explanations follow and in a fitting climax, Julie and her baby boy are returned to the first husband and father.

"Love's Redemption," the second feature of the Rialto program, is the production which presents the prize winner of the "Fame and Fortune" contest. Miss Blanche McGarity, who is the winner, is presented in the leading role, being chosen from a list of approximately fifty thousand American beauties. The story is one that carries a wide appeal, depicting her as the daughter of a confirmed criminal who desired that she follow his profession. How she finally succeeds in living the straight and narrow path and how she changes the character of her father is a story woven delightfully into the screen.

The other attractions of the Rialto are well up to the usual standard.

No less than 30,000 persons are reported missing in London each year.

ANY PORT LOOKED GOOD, STATES Q-M

HAD SUFFERED TEN YEARS FROM DYSPEPSIA AND THOUGHT HE HAD HEART TROUBLE

"By the help of Tanlac I have overcome a case of stomach trouble of ten years' standing," was the emphatic statement made, recently, by Frank P. Powers, 256 South Main street, Providence, quartermaster on boats of the Colonial Steamship Co., plying between Providence and New York.

"I could not eat anything without being in misery for hours afterwards. There were burning pains in the pit of my stomach that couldn't have been much worse if I had swallowed live coals of fire. This indigestion would wind me so that I couldn't climb a flight of stairs or walk a little ways without stopping to rest and get my breath. I also had such bad pains around my heart that I became alarmed thinking I had heart trouble. I had no appetite and was fast falling away to a skeleton. I was so thin that my clothes just hung on me like a sack, and I don't think I had a single good night's sleep in ten years. I did well to sleep two hours without waking up.

"Although I spent a large part of what I made for treatment and medicines my condition kept getting worse until I began taking Tanlac. The way this medicine has brought me out of my troubles and built me up seems almost miraculous. I bought Tanlac without having much faith in it, but it was a case of 'any port in time of storm,' and the medicine has certainly saved me from the worst. I eat just anything now, never feel a sign of indigestion and have gained fourteen pounds. My health is fine and I can't help praising Tanlac."

Tanlac and Tanlac Vegetable Pills are sold in Lowell by Green's Drug Store under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative; by Wright Drug Co., Billerica, Mass.; A. D. Falls, Chelmsford, Mass.; Snow's Pharmacy, Concord, Mass., and by the leading druggist in every town.—Adv.

Italian Destroyer Goes Down in Storm

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The Italian destroyer Centrauro has gone down in the Mediterranean sea off the port of Adalia during a storm, according to a despatch from Brindisci to the Daily Mail.

Lights and Phones Cut

near the corner of Eighth street and Bridge, smashed down clear across the Centralville thoroughfare, carrying down five wires and numerous telephone lines and covering the street and sidewalk with debris. All traffic on the Dracut line was stopped and the streets were promptly roped off and red lanterns placed at either end of the blockade to warn traffic and pedestrians.

It was the hardest job the local street railway trouble-fixers have tackled thus far since the storm began. The live wires lay in a tangled mass on Bridge street for a distance of nearly 2000 feet, and police, linemen and street railway "specials" had their hands full all night keeping autoists from entering the danger zone. Pedestrians were prevented from crossing the street by volunteer guards, some of whom remained on post for several hours at a time. Storekeepers issued warnings to customers, and all pedestrians were warned at both ends of the breakdown to be careful in crossing the street and watch the overhead wires, which sagged dangerously near the ground.

The work required to remove the broken tree branches was enormous. Linemen with axes and saws worked from 6 o'clock until nearly midnight before branches were down and dragged away to be piled up on the nearest sidewalks. In the meantime, the live wires were completely meshed in broken branches in four different instances, and the linemen had one of the most dangerous jobs in the history of repair work in Lowell, according to the company officials.

About 9 o'clock, one of the big repair trucks of the Eastern lines, which had been busy in Belvidere, managed to get through the snowdrift and slush running on low speed, and came to the aid of the wiremen who were on the job but were handicapped by small numbers. The extra crew began the job of removing the broken wires and putting in new ones, and it was the worst kind of a task with the poor lights provided. Much of the work was done in absolute darkness, the men working without gloves and in slush and water over their ankle tops. It was one of the finest performances Lowell citizens living in Centralville ever saw, and the men were finely treated by many residents and storekeepers, who sent relays of hot coffee and sandwiches to the workmen during the night. Centralville is pluckily fighting through today, and although without electric light service as far as Christian Hill, which was in total darkness last night, few can be found who have any intention of joining the Kickers' club.

The Eastern company's wire gang of experts who accomplished the five wire repairs and finished the job this morning just before daylight included John Wisted, Stephen Gilfoy, William Rourke, Edward Marcotte, Timothy Hogan, John Warren and Kitson E. Leroy.

Live Wire Danger

Joseph Vaughan, a young man employed as a delivery clerk at the John P. Curley market in John street, had a narrow escape from being electrocuted last evening when a live trolley wire wound around the axle of his truck, charging the machine with a current of several hundred volts. The young man today attributes his safety to the fact that he wore rubber boots. Vaughan was driving his truck through East Merrimack street at about 7.30 o'clock when suddenly his machine became stalled. In order to get a start to climb the hill the machine was backed several feet and one of the rear wheels struck a live wire, which was lying on the ground. The wire wound around the axle of the car, charging every steel part of the machine and in a few seconds sparks and flashes enveloped the auto. Vaughan brought his machine to a stop and crept out of the car without laying his hands on any part of it. Later the office of the electric car company was notified and skilled men were sent to the scene. In a short time the live wire was removed from the truck and Vaughan was able to proceed along as no damage had been done the car.

Narrow Escapes

Many hair-breadth escapes from accidents that might have been very serious are being reported. People from all districts tell one another of their narrow escapes. Today, for example, a driver of a team left his vehicle standing under a tree. A limb came crashing down and only that the horse instinctively shied would have landed on the horse's head. In Centralville this morning a man was saved from being electrocuted by a warning given just as the man who about to step on a live wire. A machine without chains while stopping, skidded and just missed bumping a horse and team in Merrimack street. The most dangerous spot in the city seems to be the junction of High and East Merrimack streets. A limb of a tree is on the wires and a telegraph pole is also leaning on them.

Telegraph Poles Down

There is a complete wreckage of poles along railroad tracks. From North Chelmsford to the Country club no less than thirty poles were broken off at the base. Fortunately they did not fall across the tracks, but in many places the tracks were obstructed by telegraph poles that fell under the weight of ice on the wires.

Along High Street

There is a great wreckage of trees on High street. In some places the sidewalks are completely blocked by trees bent to the ground and heavy boughs broken off. One tree in front of the Polish church lot shows a stump in the centre with half a dozen large boughs broken off and lying on the ground. Sherman street was impassable as the trees bending from either side toward the centre made a double arch completely blocking traffic. The same is true of Porter and Oak streets and lower Andover street from High to Nesmith was a mass of wreckage.

Fort Hill Park

Scores of the young maple trees set out by the park department during the past two years have been broken off and others have been bent to the ground so that they can never be straightened. The wreckage on Fort Hill park is deplorable, many of the most beautiful trees having succumbed to the weight of ice while the shrubbery is also very generally damaged.

Park Department

Seven gangs of men numbering some 50 individuals were put to work clearing away debris in many sections of the city this morning. Some of the hardest jobs to deal with were reported on Arlington street, Andover street, Fort Hill avenue and the Highlands. Central streets were looked after first, but many important traffic roads leading out of the city had to be dealt with also without delay. The work was carried on with the aid of a large truck, two single and two double pungs. Men with axes were compelled to chop away many trees and branches and throw them on the sidewalks in order to clear the way for road traffic and street cars.

The worst job for the park employes was the removal of a large tree at the corner of East Merrimack and High streets. The trunk was some 40 feet long and lay across power and light wires, and also interfered with the telephone system out that way. The work took more than two hours, and much of the debris still remains to be cleared away.

Street Department

More than 350 men were out early this morning for the street department, the call for help receiving a quick response from men without employment. Supt. Bowers sent the men out in relays, and finally got together 40 dump carts in the morning. A great deal of snow was removed from street corners and main streets. This afternoon a number of big pungs were added to the equipment. Many tree limbs had to be carted away before blockades could be lifted.

Commissioner Murphy told The Sun at noon that the department would have to spend at least $10,000 before conditions were normal. He said he did not see how the big job could be done without at least that outlay of money, and probably more might be needed. Never in his experience, he said, has he been up against anything like it. There isn't a chance of getting the streets cleared up in the central sections of the city for several days yet and it will be many weeks he said, before the debris now covering the whole city and the big parks can be removed.

More than a hundred streets in the city limits are blockaded by trees and wires at the present time. More blockades were reported to the "super" this morning.

Commissioner Murphy reported severe damage to many valuable trees on his estate at 70 Rolfe street this morning. Two handsome magnolia trees have been destroyed by snow and ice loads, and three large locust trees will have to be cut down and removed, as the branches are destroyed.

The street has been in an impassable condition for two days. Large maples and elms on Rolfe street have been destroyed and limbs strew the thoroughfare from end to end. Many wires are down in that section, too. Service to the commissioner's home was broken.

Street Railways

Although badly up against it, the street railways are making good headway in opening up lines that were closed tight yesterday. The number of wires down in every section of the suburbs, however, is hampering the recovery of traffic.

Christian Hill is off the map completely, and nothing can be done to relieve that territory until late this afternoon or tonight. Workmen were clearing the tracks on the hill route this morning, and more than fifty large tree branches had to be cut up and tossed on to the sidewalks. The wires were in bad shape, many of them being torn down and sagging over the streets in dangerous fashion.

General Manager Thomas Lees of the Eastern lines, gave The Sun a detailed description of the damage done and this morning's situation. The North Chelmsford car line was finally opened and cars are running as far as Stevens corner.

The service to Chelmsford Centre has been restored. Out Billerica way, there is double track service as far as Edson cemetery, and beyond the road has to use one track, the other being blocked completely by trees and broken limbs. The picture of the desolation in that territory beyond the cemetery is pathetic Manager Lees said. Linemen have been tackling jobs where traffic must be maintained before "side lines" are restored, but the service in most sections was getting better every hour.

In Billerica, the situation is actually desperate, with no prospects of through service to Boston for some time. The damage in Collinsville, on the Lakeview line, was heavy, but the linemen are getting out that way this afternoon, with prospects of car service to the end of the line due before tomorrow morning.

The High street and the Dracut Centre lines are open.

Public Trustee Fred J. Crowley of Boston is in town today and assisting Manager Lees in looking after all troubles.

About 150 men are out shoveling snow from the car line areas, and extra men have gone to the repair shops. Many Eastern men from other cities arrived this morning to help clear out the Lowell lines. A gang came in by truck this morning from Taunton, arriving at 8 o'clock. Eight men were in the party, and they responded promptly to Manager Lees' "S.O.S." call.

Quincy sent a batch of men over the road, eight in all, and they got here in time to get some of the spare tools. Boston headquarters got in touch with Mr. Lees by telephone, and telegraph about 9 o'clock. They offered to send the linemen anything they needed in the way of clothing, food and make arrangements for shelter. Mr. Lees at once arranged accommodations at a local hotel where the men will be kept until their work is complete. Meal checks were issued to all workmen this morning.

The Boston & Lowell division is blocked, Reading being the place where the blockade is still in force. Many Lowell workmen are down there untangling the broken wires and clearing away debris. The Lowell-Lawrence line is O.K.

The Telephone Service

Manager Leathers announced at noon that the telephone lines were still in bad shape, with but little improvement shown in the outlying sections, although extra men have been working day and night to restore some sort of service. The situation is very bad indeed in the suburbs, and no prediction can be made as to when service will be back in some decent shape.

Between 4000 and 5000 telephones are out of commission today in Lowell and vicinity. The lines north to Manchester and Concord, N. H., are out of commission, and the lines west to Worcester, Springfield and Fitchburg, are down. The service to Portland is badly interrupted. The eastern lines are working O.K. and the Boston wires are in good shape.

The telephone company officials stated this noon that the first work at hand is putting the streets in safe condition for traffic, so many wires being down that repair work and restoration of phone service cannot go along until the tangles are straightened out and the wires put back into the poles.

The service out Pawtucketville way is good as far as Sixth avenue, and out Varnum avenue way to the Lowell General hospital. South Lowell is also in O.K. condition this morning. Some sections of Belvidere are down and out.

Electric Light Service

Manager Hunnewell of the Lowell Electric Light Corp. reported but little progress in the restoration of power and light wires this morning, although current was being sent to some of the big mills outside the city. The residential sections cannot expect phone service for several days. The situation is a desperate one, Mr. Hunnewell said. Extra gangs of men are at work today endeavoring to get lights to the hospitals of the city, and the work in relieving the situation in public buildings is going on rapidly.

All power and light wires are "out" on Christian Hill, Belvidere, the Highlands, Pawtucketville and Centralville. Nothing can be done for many days to get back the service in Westford, Billerica, Chelmsford, Tewksbury and Dracut. Word came in at 10 o'clock that the service out Gorham street way and around the city hall area was back in good shape.

The street lights cannot be restored for some time but the ornamental lights, 300 or more, which ordinarily go out at 11.30 each night, will be kept lighted all night until further notice.

Thirty-five wire experts are here today, sent on emergency calls from Fall River, New Bedford, Lynn and Brockton. One truck with 10 men came in from Fall River at 4 o'clock this morning. The New Bedford crew rode in on the milk train, and from Lynn came a truck with a big squad of "extras," reaching here at 2 o'clock this morning. Brockton's crew of experts was due to arrive at 3 o'clock this afternoon. All are the very best men in the service, and all volunteered to come here, company officials said.

At 7.30 this morning, 40 men, armed with wire tools, scattered all over the city looking for trouble. Before 8 o'clock Manager Hunnewell received word from 10 former employes, now working in local banks, stores and offices, that they were coming in to help out "the boys." They arrived soon afterward, and every man had his "hooks," working clothes, life belts and hand tools. Hunnewell greeted them with a handshake and they left the office for a snowball fight of three minutes in front of the offices while the girls in the building ran to the windows and cheered the "huskies."

This afternoon the lighting corporation issued a public announcement, the first of its kind it ever had to put out before. It was explained that all former experienced employes are volunteering for help and greatly augmenting the regular crews. Extreme courtesy has been shown by out of town lighting companies in sending extra men here. The company in its "ad" gives full credit to the pluck of the men who are fighting the worst breakdowns in the history of local wire service.

Weather conditions continued unfavorable this afternoon, but the company hopes to restore service in some sections that greatly need power and light.

Work in mills outside of Lowell that was stopped yesterday by lack of power, was resumed this morning with the lines in good condition.

"Service?" said Mr. Hunnewell. "It may be several days and it may be two or three weeks before we can clean up the damage and restore power and light. It is the worst ever. If the storm abates or we get a good warm rain, our troubles would soon be over."

Linemen are at work on the pumping station circuit this afternoon, and three-ton trucks and several horses and sleds have been sent out that way with food and wire supplies.

Warnings were issued this morning by the lighting company that all persons should keep away from districts where power lines are down, whether or not the wires appear to be "alive." Attention to this warning will help in preventing accidents. The company workmen have been handling dangerous wires just as fast as the alarms come in and cannot always be on the spot when each wire falls.

Harry's Narrow Escape

Harry S. Drury of Hanks street had a narrow escape from injury last night when shortly after having parked his automobile outside his home a large tree was felled by the storm, dropping across his machine. As he heard the crash Mr. Drury rushed out to see the tree stretched across the street and over his car. In order to extricate the auto he had to summon a truck from the Church street garage. Although the auto was badly damaged Harry considers himself fortunate at having escaped injury, for had the tree fallen a few minutes before he would have been in the car.

Plymouth street in Pawtucketville, was hard hit by the storm, and perhaps more so than any other street in the city. The residents of that street are without telephone service and without electric lights, for the four poles in the street, which carried both currents, were snapped at their base yesterday. The poles fell in the street and with the exception of carrying with them the telephone and light wires, did not cause any other damage. Two other poles of the Lowell Electric Light Corp. in Hall street, between Coolidge and Aiken streets, were broken late yesterday afternoon, and as a result, the stores of that district were forced to use candles last evening.

The North Common

Numerous families residing in the vicinity of the North common, were made happy by the storm yesterday, for the breaking of limbs on the park has afforded them the opportunity of getting a supply of fuel for the winter at no expense. It is said that the broken limbs and felled trees on the common represented several hundred cords of good wood and today there is very little indication of the disaster on the common, inasmuch as the broken limbs and other pieces of wood have been removed. Men, women and children were seen on the common up to a late hour, last evening, removing the wood to their cellars, some using their arms as a means of transportation, while others made use of sleds, wheelbarrows and even go-carts. The cleaning of the park by these people in need will be a great help to the park department.

STORM NOTES

Telephone line-repair crews cleaned up the broken wires on Ann street this morning. Numerous large branches of elm trees hung on a dozen or more power and phone lines, doing much damage to lines and poles. One large pole near the corner of Merrimack street will have to be removed later.

The reports from Mt. Vernon, Arlington and Mt. Washington streets were similar to those coming in from the Belvidere sections. Many streets appeared to have been swept by a hail of shot and shell, and blockades were numerous with few workmen handy to clear the ways.

Ovila Lajoie, Merrimack street business man, protected a mass of weeping willows at his home by attaching a hose to his home hot water tank and spraying the trees, removing all ice without breaking the boughs. He was the only man on his street to protect his shrubbery that way, and the idea is spreading all over the city this afternoon, women with cans of warm water and kettles of soapsuds filled with salt solutions giving their lawn shrubs and hardy annuals a novel bath.

The situation in Belvidere is almost indescribable. Huntington and Porter streets and Fort Hill avenue were still impassable this afternoon in many places owing to fallen trees. A large maple tree at the corner of Huntington and Porter streets, one greatly admired for many years, fell a prey to the storm.

The stores in many cases have been unable to fill demands for kerosene lamps and oil. There has been a heavy demand in all sections of the city, and stores with old-fashioned hand-lamps were deluged with customers. Some lamps sold for 50 cents each, some stores got more. No advance was made in prices, and each customer got what he wanted as long as the supply lasted.

Centralville people cleaned out its supply of lamps and lanterns early last evening. Lakeview avenue stores reported "all sold" as early as 7 o'clock.

The supply of shovels at the street department employes was done around the sewer openings and catch basins. It was said at city hall that numerous basins in the down town section were clogged up and required digging out.

The ssupply of shovels at the street department headquarters ran out at 10 o'clock, and hurry calls to various hardware stores resulted in the discovery that there is a real shovel famine. No extra tools could be bought, and some of the men engaged for the shovel brigade will be put to work with brooms and hoes.

Three telephone and light poles were reported down on Mount Hope street this morning. Great damage was done to the wires at the corner of Mount Hope and White streets. The "live" wires were guarded all the morning until linemen could get there. The area appeared to have been struck by a big shell.

Several big trees and many branches are reported down on Colonial avenue in the Textile school territory.

CLEARING THE STREETS

Mayor Thompson Sends Letter to the Commissioner of Highways

Realizing the deplorable condition of the streets as a result of the storm, Mayor Perry D. Thompson sent the following letter to the commissioner of streets and highways this morning:

Nov. 29, 1921.

Dennis A. Murphy, Commissioner Department of Streets and Highways, City Hall, Lowell, Mass.

My Dear Commissioner:

A situation almost unparalleled in the history of the city has arisen on account of the terrific storm of the past few days.

In this connection and in view of the fact that many of our citizens are at present out of employment, it would seem to me that the city government should stand ready to stretch a point if necessary in the matter of expenditures of money for labor and care for as many of these men as possible.

Therefore, I urge you, that during this emergency and the great amount of cleaning-up that will be necessary, you take on as many extra men as possible.

I shall be very glad to suggest and place in motion before the municipal council any order which may assist your department financially in this matter.

Very truly yours,
PERRY D. THOMPSON.
Mayor of Lowell.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LITIGATION

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Supreme Court Justice De Courcy today took under advisement a motion in the Christian Science litigation by former Governor John L. Bates, counsel for the directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, that decrees be entered to carry into effect the decision of the court in the controversy between the directors and the trustees of the publishing society. The court in a decision handed down last week found that the directors had control over the trustees.

A motion by Gov. Bates to dissolve the injunction restraining the directors from interfering with the business of the publishing society was held open by the court for the present.

DEDICATE PORTICO OVER PLYMOUTH ROCK

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 29.—A new portico over Plymouth Rock, erected by the National Society of Colonial Dames in observance of the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims, was dedicated today. Because of the storm, all the exercises were held indoors at the First church, Unitarian.

HAS 200-MILE BEAM

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The French government is planning what is said to be the largest lighthouse in the world for its international air service. It is to be built near Dijon and be equipped with eight lenses capable of throwing rays 200 miles.

in northern sections had let up, but sleet or rain were falling in the southern tier of states and in some parts of southern New Hampshire and Vermont. The temperature, a few degrees below freezing, caused the rain to congeal on trees and wires, which were still falling today, adding to the confusion of crippled telephone, telegraph, lighting and street railway service.

Three Deaths Recorded

The storm was responsible for three deaths. Clarence G. Coburn, a grocer of Lowell, who was fatally injured when he was struck by a falling limb, died at a hospital. Two persons were electrocuted in Rhode Island when they came in contact with dangling wires.

Mills and factories depending upon electric power for operation were closed in many cases; homes in two score of cities and towns were without electric lights; telephone toll service was demoralized and many lines cut off; trolley lines were out of commission in suburbs and running with difficulty in some cities, and railroad trains were running slightly behind schedule.

Serious Conditions Off Shore

Girl Testifies Against Negroes

called. She was attended by Dr. Henry C. H. Snow of Buzzards Bay, her family physician, and a witness in the case.

At the opening of court this morning, the case of the commonwealth was outlined by District Attorney Kenney. Mr. Kenney said that he would show that while Miss Butler and her escort, William O. Eldredge, Jr., whom he described as a man in stature, although he had not matured to the same extent mentally, were on their way home from a dance. At Bournehurst she was held up by one of the defendants by a revolver and ordered to enter an automobile. The two other defendants both of whom had revolvers, grabbed Eldredge and ordered him into the car.

The party proceeded in the direction of Plymouth, Eldredge and Miss Butler being kept covered all the time. The three men demanded that Miss Butler and Eldredge give them all the money they had; the girl handed over less than a dollar, and Eldredge about $5. Near the railroad cut which the jury visited yesterday, Mr. Kenney said, the defendants stopped the car to measure the gasoline in the tank; finding the supply low, Dies and Andrews went to get some, while Gomes stood guard over Eldredge and Miss Butler in the rear of a cemetery nearby.

Finally the other two men returned without any gasoline and said: "She wouldn't give us any."

Girl Assaulted by All Three

"Go back and make her give it to you," they were told. Mr. Kenney said he would show that a Miss Kimball, near Lakecroft Inn was awakened twice that night by men seeking gasoline. She told them to go to the next house. The government would show that one of the defendants appeared later at Lakecroft with a five gallon can taken from Miss Kimball's premises, and that next morning an automobile left disabled nearby was found with the cap off the gasoline tank and the tank empty.

The gasolene tank replenished, the party drove off. The men had promised Miss Butler they would get her home safely, but later the car was stopped, Eldredge was ordered out, and the girl was assaulted by the three men in turn. They then took her name and Eldredge's, threatened them that if they ever told, they would be "got," and released them.

Actress Tells Secret
Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture
Joicey Williams, the well known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:
"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.
These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—Adv.

IS YOUR COLOR FADING?

It is the blood that gives color to the cheeks and lips as well as brightness to the eyes. If your blood gets thin the color will fade and the eyes grow dim. By the time this happens you will also notice that you tire easily and are subject to headaches and backaches for the blood goes everywhere and the entire system feels the effects when it becomes thin.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain the elements necessary to make new blood and, as the nerves get their nourishment from the blood, have been found invaluable in a wide range of diseases of the blood and nerves, such as rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers, neuralgia and nervous debility.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists or direct from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., on receipt of price, 50 cents per box. Send for the free booklet, "Building Up the Blood."—Adv.

DEC. 4 TO 10 EDUCATION WEEK

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—President Harding issued a proclamation today setting apart the week of Dec. 4 to 10 as American education week, during which citizens of the United States are urged to assist general efforts to reduce illiteracy and give thought to remedying defects in the nation's educational system.

ULSTER AND SINN FEIN MAY UNITE

May Some Day Unite "Of Their Own Free Wills," Says Ulster Chief

LONDON, Nov. 29—(By the Associated Press) Admission of the possibility that Ulster and the south of Ireland may some day unite "of their own free wills" in the government of all Ireland, is ascribed to Sir James Craig, Ulster premier, in an interview published today by the Daily Mirror.

"I do not say that Ulster will never accept an all-Ireland council, though the Sinn Fein says it will never accept any other scheme." Sir James is quoted as saying: "What we say is, let the Sinn Fein first prove its ability to govern itself along constitutional lines. Let it win Ulster's confidence by practical proof of its fairness and impartiality toward the southern Unionists. Then in the course of time, the two Irish governments might coalesce of their own free wills."

Sir James says while Ulster remains a part of the United Kingdom, England can always land troops in Ireland by way of Ulster, if Great Britain's safety should be "jeopardized."

If Ulster should accept all of Sinn Fein's demands, Sir James continues, "England would then banish Ulster from its mind." He adds: "If Sinn Fein began to oppress Ulster under the All-Ireland council, England would then answer Ulster's complaints by saying: 'You accepted the council; you must manage your own affairs now.' Indeed, England would have no right to interfere."

Ulster Newspaper

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Preparations are being made here to publish a newspaper with morning and evening editions, devoted to the cause of Ulster, according to the Daily Mirror, which says 250,000 pounds has already been raised for the purpose.

Optimistic Over Ireland

LONDON, Nov. 29 (by the Associated Press).—Political commentators in morning newspapers view the Irish situation with unusual calm. They appear to adopt the view ascribed to official circles that, even though the peace movement receives a setback now, it may ultimately reach a satisfactory conclusion.

Craig Says Offer Impossible

BELFAST, Nov. 29.—(By the Associated Press)—Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, speaking before the northern parliament here today, said he had told Prime Minister Lloyd George that the British government's proposals to Ulster for the settlement of the Irish question were utterly impossible. He said Ulster would not enter an all-Ireland parliament under the present conditions, but was prepared to discuss other avenues for settlement.

The premier said the accounts of the government's plans for an all-Ireland parliament that had appeared in the press were "fairly accurate."

Replying to a question, he said the Northern Ireland cabinet had given instructions for the immediate enrollment of 700 while time "specials" and 5000 part time "specials" to complete the establishment of these forces.

Why Dread Old Age?

It don't make much difference how old you are if you only keep in good health and are active. Many people appear older at 50 than others do at 70, to keep looking young you have got to enjoy good health, and do as little worrying as possible. Backaches, swollen joints and legs, disturbed sleep by being compelled to arise one or more times during the night are sure symptoms of kidney trouble, and should have immediate attention to avoid serious consequences. SEVEN BARKS, nature's remedy of roots and herbs, is one of the best remedies to take not only for affected kidneys, but for liver, stomach and heart troubles.

Middle-aged people realize that they cannot perform their work or move around as fast as formerly. The intestinal organs feel the effect of age and do not perform their work properly. The heart palpitates on the slightest exertion and the back aches after a day's work. The muscles and flesh get flabby, and the blood thinner than formerly, it is then you need a good tonic and bowel regulator—you cannot find a more reliable and efficient remedy for those conditions than SEVEN BARKS.

If you want to enjoy life, recover some of your youthful vigor and have the glow of health, get SEVEN BARKS of your druggist. Do not accept a substitute.—Adv.

Adventures of the Twins

"THE STOLEN KEY"

WHEN HE HAD GONE, MR. PIM PIM TURNED TO NANCY AND NICK

The twins liked Mr. Pim Pim at once. He was the fat, funny little leader of the Brownies, you know, and the children had come to help him. What does fatness, or funniness, or plumpiness count for if one's eyes are kind and merry? And Pim Pim's eyes were the nicest ever.

"I must be going now," said the magical mushroom when the how-do-you-do's were over. "You children are all right with your magical shoes 'n' all, and I'm sure that the three of you will get along famously. Mr. Pim Pim will show you where to dig the sparkling colors for the Christmas toys and if I am not mistaken, he has two enchanted shovels to give you. But there! Pim Pim will tell you all about that himself. I'm only being a gossip. Bye-bye, kiddies! Be good!" Then kissing them both affectionately and shaking hands with the Brownie king, off went the good old fairy. Or rather out he went, like a candle flame when you blow it. One instant he was there and the next he wasn't, that was all! That's what comes of being magical.

When he had gone, Mr. Pim Pim turned to Nancy and Nick. "Well, well, well!" he said. "You couldn't have come at a better time, for Klp has been cutting up high jinks. You know he used to be leader of the Brownies and is now trying to do what he can to hinder me in my work. What do you think he's done? Stolen the key to my cupboard where I had the shovels hidden! The worst of it is that he's skipped off through the secret passage to the village of the gnomes, and if he gives the gnomes the key, dear knows when we'll ever get it. The gnomes have as many secret places to hide things as a porcupine has quills."

MAY REVISE MINIMUM WAGE SCALE

(Special to The Sun)

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Wages paid to women and to minors employed in retail stores will probably be revised in the near future, through action of a wage board which was reconvened last night, by the minimum wage division of the department of labor and industries.

The board was originally organized in 1915, and at that time established a minimum scale of wages, which has since been in effect. The scale, which is the minimum that may be paid to workers, is:

Women more than 18 years of age, and with more than one year's experience in a retail store, $8.50.

Inexperienced workers, more than 18 years of age, $7 per week.

Minors between 16 and 17 years, $6 per week.

Minors less than 17 years old, $5 per week.

On the board which convened tonight for a private conference are three representatives of the public, Prof. Carroll W. Doten of Cambridge, chairman; Miss Martha M. Weed and Dr. William M. Tenney, both of Boston. Representing the employes are Mrs. Grace M. Brown, Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, D. J. Nally and Miss Julia S. O'Connor, all of Boston; Mrs. E. F. Maguire of Newton, and Joseph O'Keefe of Worcester.

Employers are represented by Walter A. Hawkins of Jordan, Marsh and Co.; Abbott B. Rice of the Glen Shirt and Collar Co., Boston; Felix Vorenberg of the Gilchrist Co., Boston; George H. Johnson of R. H. White and Co., Boston; A. E. Bardon of Boston and Harry Chabby of Brockton.

PELLETIER DENIES ALLEN'S CHARGES

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Attorney General J. Weston Allen charged before the full bench of the supreme court yesterday that District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier of Suffolk county in a speech as candidate for mayor had asserted that members of the court "take their orders" from financiers who are members of the exclusive Union club. The attorney general was arguing before the court for a speedy trial on charges on which he seeks Pelletier's removal from office.

Pelletier, in replying, asserted that the charge was a "lie." "I never said it," he continued. "It is a misstatement. I will answer that here and now. I never said that at anytime."

SALVADO GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Antonio I. Salvado, aged 28, of Holyoke, was sentenced to life imprisonment yesterday afternoon in the superior criminal court, East Cambridge by Judge John P. Brown, after he had pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, when arraigned on an indictment charging him with murder in the first degree. Salvado's plea of second degree guilt was accepted by Dist. Atty. Saltonstall.

Salvado was charged with the murder of Paulos Torre, a foreman in charge of a section gang of which Salvado was a member, while the men were working on the state road in Littleton. Torre's body was found on the morning of Oct. 14 last in a patch of woods, a bullet hole in his head and his money belt missing.

Shortly after the finding of the body Salvado was placed under arrest and subsequently indicted by the Middlesex county grand jury.

MAY CANONIZE BISHOP NEUMANN

ROME, Nov. 29—(By the Associated Press) The Congregation of Rites, which deals with the questions of the beatification and canonization of saints, met yesterday in the presence of the pope to discuss the heroism and virtues of Rt. Rev. John N. Neumann, bishop of Philadelphia from 1852 to his death in 1860.

John Nepomucene Neumann was born in Prachatitz, Bohemia, March 28, 1811, and was ordained a priest in New York by Bishop Dubois in 1836. After serving in missions, he was appointed in 1844 superior of the Redemptorist convent of Pittsburgh. He wrote a catechism and Bible history for use in schools, and in 1845, was appointed superior of the American province.

He was rector of St. Alphonsus' church in Baltimore before his appointment as bishop of Philadelphia. Steps toward his canonization were taken in 1884, but were not completed.

DENIES MAYOR CALLS CHICAGO GERMAN CITY

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago did not classify Chicago as "the sixth German city in the world" his attorney David H. Jackson, declared in his argument before Judge Brothers of the circuit court, on the demurrer of the mayor in the latter's $500,000 libel suit against the Chicago Tribune.

The judge took part in the discussion when Attorney Jackson, reading quotations from the Tribune article which formed the basis for the mayor's suit, came to the alleged quotations "the sixth German city."

"Is it your contention," asked the judge, "that he did not say it."

"Yes, it is," replied Attorney Jackson.

Attorney Weymouth Kirkland here interjected that "there were six people present when he said it."

Attorney Jackson said more than once that reporters had "coaxed" Mayor Thompson into making statements that would suit their own purposes.

NO REDRESS IF WRONG HOUSE IS RAIDED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Prohibition agents who raided the wrong house after exercising the usual care can not be held to blame, prohibition Commissioner Haynes held yesterday in exonerating E. B. Henson, a special agent, from charges preferred by Mayor Stewart of Savannah, Ga.

Henson was charged by the Savannah mayor in protests sent to President Harding and the Georgia senators with having entered the private residence of Miss Bessie Garden of that city "without justification and apparently without a warrant."

Commissioner Haynes instituted an inquiry and was advised by Henson that the Garden home was raided by mistake, the entrance having been made from the rear by the raiding party which had a warrant for a house nearby. The explanation was considered as satisfactory by Mr. Haynes, it was announced today at prohibition headquarters.

DEATH TOLL IN MOVIE HOUSE FIRE NOW 6

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 29.—Two more persons who were burned in the fire which destroyed the Rialto theatre Sunday night, died today, making the actual death list six, the coroner having eliminated the name of Timothy Hanlon, who was a victim of heart disease. Those who died today were Everett Case and Victor Cortelier, both of this city.

The deaths last night were those of Allen Keith, a Yale sophomore whose home was in Southport, Conn., and Miss Mabel Moran, a telephone operator at Derby, Conn.

The funeral of Keith will take place from Battell chapel tomorrow afternoon and his classmates will attend in a body.

It is said of Keith that after getting out of the theatre unharmed he returned and assisted a number of women, returning again to search for others. It was on his last trip, which he prolonged in order to grope about in the smoke, that he was burned. His mother, Mrs. R. C. Gilmore of Southport, was called to the bedside yesterday.

SOCIETY OF INDUSTRIAL SCIENCE

The next meeting of the Lowell Society of Industrial Science will be held Wednesday, November 30, at the Y.M.C.A., at 7.30 p.m. Mr. R. E. Frederick of this city, will address the society on the topic, "Vocational Training as Applied to Industry." The talk will be illustrated with stereoptican views through the kindness of the state department of education. Mr. Frederick has given this talk before several groups in Lowell and is well qualified to talk on the subject, as he has had much experience as a vocational teacher. Admission is free and all those interested are invited to attend.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

N. Y. WOMEN POLICE OFFICERS CALLED OUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The clarion call to duty sounded for the first time yesterday in the ears of New York's 2500 women traffic police—called out, official orders said, to replace male regulars assigned to protect milk wagons during the milk handlers' strike.

But the day dawned, cold and sodden with rain and orders, nearly 80 per cent. of the women cops reflected, said nothing about going out in the rain.

Throughout the day curious pedestrians sought but failed to find the turnout of "blue petticoats" quite up to expectations. A poll completed last night revealed that 562 had reported and been assigned to busy corners near public schools. "But we were deluged with phone calls from women who want to become traffic police," reported Sergt. George M. Rennselaer, in charge of the women's headquarters. Applications, he said, would be accepted.

DISABLED VETERANS HOLD MEETING

The Lowell post of the Disabled American Veterans' association met in Memorial hall last evening with an attendance of 150 members, George Whelton, president pro-tem, presided, with Mr. Kelly acting as temporary secretary. The assembly voted to apply for a charter at the state headquarters in Boston, which, it is expected, will be in the possession of the post at its next meeting, Monday evening, December 5, also in Memorial hall. Election of permanent officers is to be held at that meeting and a representative of state headquarters will be on hand to address the members outlining the purpose and aim of the organization and instructing those who still have disability claims against the government how to file the same. A large number of disabled veterans of the world war, not only from Lowell, but also from nearby towns, have signified avowed intentions of joining this post and the next meeting will bring out a large attendance, the chairman feels.

HIGH RECORD FOR LIBERTY BONDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Five of the more active issues comprising the Liberty bond and Victory note securities rose to new high records for a year or more on the stock exchange yesterday. Their advance coincides with further enormous accumulations, presumably from investment sources.

The second 4's gained 18 cents per $100 to 95.88; first 4¼'s, 82 cents to 97.00; second 4¼'s, 16 cents, to 96.14, and fourth 4¼'s, 12 cents, to 96.50.

Victory 3¾'s made only a nominal advance of two cents to par, that figure, however, being a new high for the year. Victory 4¾'s duplicated their previous maximum of par on very large individual transactions, including one block of $1,000,000 and another of $500,000.

Boston Business Man Tells How He Keeps "As Fit as a Fiddle."

161 Dartmouth Street
Boston, Mass.
Nov. 3rd, 1921.

Messrs. Edward Lassere, Inc.
400 West 23rd St., New York City.

Gentlemen:

I am now in my eighty-fifth year, and am enjoying much better health than the average person of my advanced age. My mental faculties retain their keenness; my step is still brisk and elastic; I have an abundance of energy; sleep soundly; have an excellent appetite; and am not unduly susceptible to colds. I am, in short, far more robust of mind and body than many much younger men and women of my own acquaintance. And I am convinced beyond shadow of doubt that I owe my present excellent physical and mental condition to Wincarnis.

Some five years ago, I began to feel the weight of accumulated years bear more and more heavily upon my frame. I tired quickly; lacked spirit and energy; spent restless nights; paid the usual penalty for every exposure to a draft, and had many a spell of mental depression. I made the usual experiments with preparations that were said to be tonics, with the result that I grew more and more discouraged—even to the point of despondency, I might say.

It was just at the time of my greatest dejection that I decided to try Wincarnis, and the quickness with which I felt reinvigoration returning was really astonishing and delightful. My restoration was as rapid as it was complete, and from that day to this I have taken a dose of Wincarnis at least once every day. A dose of this wonderful tonic every morning is the best of "uplifts" for one in need of stamina. Wincarnis is certainly the best tonic on the market, and it gives me genuine pleasure to say so.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Geo. H. Dupee.

Boxing

Promoter Dodge has finally untangled the snarl resulting from the Duffy-Gould disappointment and has now completed the card for Thursday night's show. In the final 10-rounder Mike Castle and Steve Gustin will mix it. Kid Lee of Chelsea, the tough little veteran of many ring encounters, will try to stow away Johnny (Tip) Quinn of Lowell in another 10-rounder. It will be a hard tussle for the local boxer. Red Madden of Lawrence will tackle the Gunner Jack, also of Lawrence, in one of the preliminaries.

Billy Nelson will try to head off the amateur champ in Gustin's camp and this squabble ought to be a summer. Johnny Moran is high in his praise of the C.M.A.C. youngster and Joe Walsh will find his first professional fight no snap.

Rarely has any incident of the ring created the discussion that "Wild Man" Gould's infraction of the Marquis of Queensbury rules at Fall River a week ago has caused. Many times it has happened that a boxer, resenting the attitude of a referee in the ring, has let go a punch in the direction of the official, but not within the memory of many of the older followers of the ring in this vicinity at least, has it ever before been recorded where a boxer actually knocked out a referee. Report from the "battle front" say that the incident, while serious was funny, and few in the hall could refrain from joining in the general hilarity that followed. "It was a scream," says one report. "Nothing like it in ring history" says another. And so on, but all agree, the referee making it unanimous, that the "wild one" was never wilder and never hit any harder than when he landed the wallop that sent the official into slumberland long enough to permit the enraged boxer to toll off the fatal ten.

Leo Flynn, matchmaker for the Madison Square garden, has an attractive show scheduled for this evening. The main fracas shows Champion Benny Leonard against George Ward, Willie Jackson will attempt to eliminate Jimmy Hanlon from the list of contenders, Joe Gorman and Earl Baird will try and settle which one of them is entitled to a chance at Johnny Kilbane's crown, and last but not least the sterling Dane, Pete Hartley, mingles with Joe Benjamin, the sensational coast boxer. All these bouts are for 10 rounds and each team is evenly matched and some real fights are expected.

Jock Malone, the flashy St. Paul middleweight, will give Pal Reed an opportunity to wipe out the defeat he tacked on the Framingham man's record when they meet at Boston Friday night in a 10-round number.

Young Chakas, the rugged Manchester, N. H., lightweight, who has appeared several times in this vicinity, will trade wallops with Dick Russell of Lynn at Nashua Friday night in a 10-round bout.

Benny Valgar and Kid Murphy box at Yonkers, Dec. 1.

Mike Gibbons has been signed to box Frank Carbone at New Orleans Dec. 28.

LOWELL WON FROM FALL RIVER LAST NIGHT

The Lowell poloists got back into their winning stride last night and defeated the Fall River club at the Crescent rink by the score of 7 to 3.

The visiting players did not arrive until 9 o'clock, due to the storm, but the fans waited patiently and gave them a good reception when they reached the rink.

Lowell played superior polo and had little difficulty in handling the verdict. Alexander, Davies and Quigley had their combination offensive working to perfection and Morrison and Blount performed up to the mark in the defensive.

"Bob" Hart of Fall River played hard, driving as of old, but he failed to get one by Blount's pads. Earl Pierce appeared on the rush line with Hart, but he failed to "feed" Hart well enough to enable the hard and accurate driving rush to be at his best. Foley at halfback for the visitors played great polo.

After the first period Lowell had it all its own way, with Alexander starring in the scoring activities.

It was announced that Providence will come here Saturday afternoon to play off the game which was thrown out by Sec. Perrin as a result of Capt. Quigley's protest. The lineup:

PROVIDENCE 4, NEW BEDFORD 3

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 29.—The classiest game of polo seen here, was the verdict of the large crown of fans who turned out to witness the game here last night in which Providence nosed out New Bedford, 4 to 3. The count was 3-1 going into the third period and when the Goldbugs nicked another for good measure, it looked as though the Whalers' fate was sealed. The wizardy of Duggan netted a brace of registers, however, and for the remainder of the distance both quintets made the going as fast as has been seen in any polo exhibition ever staged here. Lyons, the Goldbug back, played his usual fine game, and he smothered many drives that were labelled for the Providence net. The score:

Lowell at Woonsocket.
Worcester at Lawrence.
Providence at New Bedford.
Salem at Fall River.

POLO NOTES

Last night's attendance was of fair size, despite the storm.

It was announced that New Bedford will play here Friday night and Providence Saturday afternoon, the latter game being a play-off of the game of last Friday night, thrown out by the league secretary as a result of Capt. Quigley's protest over Referee Ford's decisions.

The work of Referee Kilgara was very satisfactory.

LOWELL MEN HONORED

That Lowell still retains her prestige in all branches of sport was again demonstrated on Sunday night, when five Lowell men, members of the Tipperary Gaelic football team, were presented with gold medals at the closing session for the 1921 season of the Massachusetts Gaelic football league in Historic hall, Deacon building, Boston.

Representatives of 15 teams were present when the 15 members of the Tipperary team were presented medals of Celtic Cross design, beautifully engraved with Irish characters. The Tipperary boys went through the season undefeated in a league game, although the Lowell St. Enda's team defeated them in a game in the early part of the season. A pleasing program was presented, including addresses by several of the leading officials of Cambridge and Boston, and a literary and musical program.

Francis Tiernan, president of the Irish Country clubs of Boston, was the principal speaker. He spoke of the great aid in the promotion of Gaelic sports afforded by the winning team during the 1921 season. After the address the members of the team were decorated with the medals by John J. Foley, state vice president of the A.A.R.I.R., and past president of the Boston Irish Country clubs.

The Lowell men who received medals were: Paddy White, Daniel Clancy, John Cunningham, George Conboy and Michael F. Quinn. They also played with the St. Enda's team of Lowell, which is expected to enter the state league next year.

California Issues Defi to the East

University of California has again won the championship title of the Pacific Coast conference.

The team which humbled Ohio State last year at the Tournament of Roses had no trouble annexing the coast title for the second time in succession.

Coach Andy Smith, the former University of Pennsylvania star, who has met with such great success at California, believes his eleven is better than anything in the east. What is more, Smith is willing, yes, anxious, to prove such a statement.

Who will play California at the coming Tournament of Roses is still a matter of doubt. An invitation has been extended to a number of the leading teams in the east.

"Brick" Muller, who was the big star at California last year, was hurt in the Nevada game, and has been on the shelf ever since. He is being carefully groomed for the big game with the east. However, a youngster by the name of Stephens has more than filled the bill at end.

Billy Evans Picks All-Eastern Football Team

By BILLY EVANS

Picking an All-Eastern football eleven is ordinarily a rather easy task, as certain players usually stand out prominently.

This year it is different in the east. There are a lot of mighty good football players on the eastern elevens, but only one who is the premier at his position, Killinger of Penn State.

For the past 15 years it was the exception to have the critics differ on more than three positions. It was almost a certainty from the start of the season as to the leaders in the other positions.

It is going to be mighty different this year. A lot of the experts in the east are going to differ widely in their selections. This was evident to me at the Yale-Princeton game. I asked five of the leading experts of the east as to the best ends. Snively of Princeton was the only player to get as many as three votes in the five selections.

Last year Stanley Keck of Princeton was practically a unanimous choice for tackle. He was regarded as the best in the east, yes, in the country, at that position. Keck is as good if not a better tackle this year, but injuries prevented him from being at his best in the Yale game. A number of critics for that reason may weaken on Keck, but to my way of thinking it is impossible to overlook his great ability.

In the west McGuire is rated as a great tackle. In the first two periods of the Chicago-Princeton game McGuire slightly outplayed Keck. Coach Roper easily explained this by saying Princeton had expected Chicago to play an open game, and that he had instructed his line to play high and keep their heads up. Instead, Chicago played a running game off tackle and round the ends. The Chicago forwards charging low were making trouble for the Princeton line, and McGuire was putting Keck out of many a play.

Keck Is Real Star

McGuire himself admits that when Keck got down and started to charge low, it was impossible to make any advance against him. Into of Yale was the other tackle.

The ends in the east this year are generally admitted to be below the standard. In fact there are not very many good ends in the east. Snively of Princeton is a wonder at throwing forward passes and is a good defensive player.

Macomber of Harvard makes a fine running mate for Snively. On offense he knows how to box the tackle and is a wonder at getting interference out of the way. He is also a good man at receiving the forward pass. Sturm of Yale and McCollum of Penn State are two other good ends.

Brown of Harvard is just about the best guard in the east. In the Yale game he was at his peak. He smeared most of the plays directed at him, and made many tackles behind the line. Carney of Annapolis is also a mighty fine guard. His work has featured practically every game the Navy has played. Against Princeton he scored the touchdown that beat the Tigers. Baker of Princeton is close up.

Stein at centre has played his usual fine game. In only the Nebraska game has he failed to shine. He has been the strength of the Pittsburgh line, and has done more open field tackling than any man on the team. Wittmer of Princeton and Shurtleff of Brown are close rivals.

Killinger gets the quarterback job. He is the one outstanding star of the east, who can do everything well.

Aldrich Gets Position

Aldrich of Yale by his fine work all year and his stellar performances against Princeton and Harvard, is entitled to one of the halfback positions. I have my doubts as to the other. I like Davies of Pittsburgh. True, he has not been in the headlines as much this year, however, not due to any weakness on his part but rather his team. He is such a great player that it is almost impossible to pass him up. Mallory of Yale, Lightner of Penn State, Kaw of Cornell, Robertson of Dartmouth and Gilroy of Princeton are other good backs.

Owen of Harvard has played consistently good football all year, and I have placed him at fullback.

Today's Sport Angle

This is the open season for football championships.

A lot of pencils and reams of paper are going to be used by the experts in their attack on comparative scores.

The other day a supporter of Iowa doped it out that Iowa on comparative scores was 69½ points better than Harvard. His dope was so intricate that no one but a college professor would have been able to decipher it.

Penn State was going great until the Pittsburgh game. That tie game with Glenn Warner's team has upset calculations a trifle.

Washington and Jefferson, which beat Pittsburgh 7 to 0, is pointing to that victory to prove that it is a stronger team than Penn State.

In the middlewest Notre Dame and Iowa are the big favorites for college championship of the universe. On the coast they are shouting the praises of Andy Smith's California eleven.

Because of the scrambled condition of the Big Three, due to Princeton's victory over Harvard, Yale's win over Princeton and Harvard's defeat of Yale, no claims are being made.

It is to be regretted that there is no way to settle the college honors to the satisfaction of all concerned. However, it is absolutely impossible to arrange schedules that will meet the situation.

While the public is interested as to who is really the champion, few of the colleges consider it of any great importance.

The sport is the thing with the colleges. Not who won the championship. —B. E.

CONROY NEW NAVY LEADER

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29—The members of the naval academy football team elected Vincent P. Conroy of Ogden, Utah, to captain the team for next season, taking the place of Emory E. Larson who has filled that position so successfully, but who graduates in June.

Conroy was promoted from squad B to the varsity squad late in the season of 1919, and has played regularly in the backfield for two seasons.

Conroy has played an excellent game this year, though he has not carried the ball so much as Barchat or Koehler; however, he has done a good share of this work and has directed the playing during most of the important games this season. He is regarded as highly qualified to fill the position. He is one of the academy's finest athletes, being a regular of the lacrosse twelve and a member of the wrestling squad. In last Saturday's game against the Army, Conroy scored the only touchdown, and it is admitted that he handled the team in masterly style.

GILROY CAPTAIN OF PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 29—Ralph C. Gilroy, of Haverhill, Mass., a junior was yesterday elected to be captain of Princeton football eleven next fall. The election came according to the annual custom, immediately following the picture of the men who took part in either this year's Harvard or Yale games.

No other man, eligible to the captaincy, has had anything like the experience of Gilroy. He was defensive halfback on his freshman team and immediately won the same position on the varsity of two years ago and held it through last season and this. The new leader has a record in that he has started in every varsity game since he became eligible in sophomore year to go out for it. He prepared at Haverhill high school and his prep school experience consisted of two years on that team and two years at Exeter as a halfback in 1917 and 1918.

Ralph Gilroy is 21 years old. Weighs 165 pounds and is five feet, eight and one-half inches high. Gilroy is a man of iron and has not been really injured during his entire football career. At Exeter he played in the same back field as did Don Lourie.

SEEK COLLEGE STAR

Huffman, who has played a great game at tackle for Ohio State this fall, is also a star ball player. He is said to be one of the best catchers in the western conference. As a collegian Huffman is a hard hitter, great thrower and line receiver. He is also fast for a big fellow. He led the state team in stolen bases last season. It is said that Business Manager Bobby Quinn of St. Louis has tendered Huffman a contract and is willing to give him a chance to show his worth as a big leaguer.

YALE CAPTAIN STARS

The remarkable playing of Captain Aldrich of Yale in both the Harvard and Princeton game ranks him as one of the greatest backfield men in the history of that institution. Aside from his great work on the gridiron, Aldrich was the outstanding figure on the Yale baseball team last season. Aldrich is All-America calibre.

TRACK COACH AT B.U.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The appointment of Oscar Hedlund, holder of the two-mile indoor track record and a member of the 1912 Olympia team as track coach at Boston university, was announced today. Hedlund's specialty when he was competing was the mile run and in 1913 he equalled the mile indoor record of 4.19 4-5.

ZBYSZKO BEATS LEWIS

Wrestling Champion Wins Two of Three Falls and Retains His Title

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Wrestling rules of years ago were enforced here last night, and recognition was given the rolling falls, which enabled Stanislaus Zbyszko to retain his heavyweight wrestling title in a finish match with Ed (Strangler) Lewis.

Lewis won the first fall last night with a flying headlock after 17 minutes and 31 seconds of wrestling. Zbyszko was awarded the second fall after 21 minutes 26 seconds and the third fall, also of the rolling type, came in 14 minutes 56 seconds. Zbyszko taking Lewis to the mat with a double armlock.

MAY CHANGE COACHES

Failure of a number of the major colleges to have a big year in football has caused rumors to float about that changes will be made in the coaching systems. Dartmouth is already planning for something better. It is intended to have a head coach and two assistants. The absolute failure of Minnesota makes it seem that "Doc" Williams is about through. Early reverses at Michigan brought criticism for Yost. Michigan, however, in the last two games has showed a decided improvement.

WINTER FOOTBALL PRACTICE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Winter football practice got under way at the University of Pennsylvania today. One hundred and twenty-five men reported for the first practice yesterday but rain caused a postponement. The innovation is the result of Pennsylvania's season of gridiron defeats.

Nearly all babies in the Samoa are taught to swim by the time they are 3 or 4 years old.

LOWELL TEXTILE BASKETBALL SQUAD

Tomorrow afternoon a squad of 20 or more basketball players will report to Captain Lombard to try for places on Lowell Textile's quintet. The call for candidates came after the Thanksgiving recess. A 14-game schedule has been arranged by Manager James A. Nary and from a glance at the list the local hoopsters are in for an extremely busy winter.

Boston college is booked for two games this season, one to be played here Feb. 3, and the other in Boston on Feb. 14. Last year it was the great all around work of Luke Urban of the maroon and old gold that sent the local boys to defeat. It will be a different story this year as Urban has since been graduated.

The team this year will be built around Capt. Lombard, Schneider, Smith and Matthews. While it seems only one man is needed, it is expected there are several in the freshman class who will fight hard to gain a place on the five.

The schedule follows:

Fitchburg Normal, Jan. 7, at Lowell.
Providence college, Jan. 13, at Lowell.
New Hampshire State, Jan. 18, at Durham.
Northeastern college, Jan. 21, at Lowell.
New Bedford Textile, Jan. 28, at Lowell.
Boston college, Feb. 3, at Lowell.
Norwich university, Feb. 9, at Northfield, Vt.
University of Vermont, Feb. 10, at Burlington, Vt.
St. Michael's college, Feb. 11, at Burlington, Vt.
Boston college, Feb. 14, at Boston.
University of Vermont, Feb. 17, at Lowell.
Fall River Textile, Feb. 24, at Lowell.
Rhode Island State, Feb. 28, at Kingston, R. I.
Open, March 4.
Open, March 5.
Norwich university, March 11, at Lowell.

MINNESOTA COACH LAUDS DEVINE

All the experts seem agreed that Arthur Devine is a football player extraordinary.

Dr. Williams, famous coach at the University of Minnesota, has a mighty good opinion of Devine.

Iowa trimmed Minnesota 41 to 7. Devine made five touch-downs in bringing about the rout of Minnesota, so it is only natural that Williams should have some kind words to say.

"Arthur Devine is not only of All-America calibre," says Williams, "but is the best all around backfield man I ever saw play. He rates higher than Johnny McGovern or Walter Eckersall."

FAVOR NEW SCHEDULE

Princeton and Yale favor a change in the football schedule with Harvard. The present scheme, which has been in vogue for some time, brings Harvard and Princeton together first, then Princeton and Yale, and finally Yale and Harvard. This gives Harvard a two weeks' rest between games, while Yale and Princeton play on successive Saturdays. Princeton and Yale rightly contend there should be a rotation of the schedule each year.

WEST VS. EAST POPULAR

While games between Yale, Harvard and Princeton will always go big because of the color and rivalry that always exists, the trend of football is toward intersectional games. The great showing by the western teams has created unusual interest in such games. A number have already been suggested for next year.

BABE RUTH WILL ASK $85,000 FOR 1922

BY BILLY EVANS

Fifty thousand dollars from the New York Americans, and five thousand dollars from each other club in the American league.

That is the salary that Babe Ruth will ask for the season of 1922. I have Babe's word for it.

Ruth had a sliding contract with the New York American league club last year. His actual salary was $20,000. He received a bonus for his home-run record, which perhaps carried the figure to $35,000. Ruth's contract with the American league expired at the close of the 1921 season. When he confers with the New York club, he intends to ask a combined salary that will total $55,000, which is $10,000 in advance of what the president of the United States receives.

This will be the first time that a player has demanded a salary from other clubs in the league, to which he is in no way affiliated other than being a member of the same organization.

"I broke the home-run records in 1920 and 1921," says Ruth. "Likewise I broke a lot of attendance records. Fifty-nine home runs are a large flock. I am going to be mighty lucky if I break that mark in 1922. If I don't break it, I am going to fade out of the picture.

"I am a big card right now; the moment I quit smacking those old home runs, every one is going to forget all about me.

"The time to get the dough, is to get it while the getting is good. If I can't get it now, I never will be able to come through.

"I feel that I am an asset at the gate to every club in the league, that is why I feel the burden of my salary should be divided."

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE

Members of Hamilton Manufacturing Association Hear Highly Interesting Lecture

The world disarmament conference now sitting at Washington, its exact makeup, its purpose, its accomplishments so far, the problems it faces and must solve the results it is likely to achieve, all that this meeting of the nations' greatest statesmen aims to accomplish was vividly described by Congressman John Jacob Rogers in an interesting address before the members of the Hamilton Manufacturing association last night.

The speaker drew a realistic picture of that select gathering now sitting in the capital discussing the topic that is the momentous subject among the powers of the world today. He described the general purpose of the conference, the nations represented, with the aid of a blackboard showed the layout of the conference hall, the exact positions occupied by the delegates, told of the most noteworthy characteristics of the men, their aims and views, intermingled his lecture with funny inklings relative to some of the foreign representatives, referred to the points sought by some of the nations, indicated what the meeting thus far had done, and in a most clear and interesting fashion set forth the real questions confronting the conference, matters just now attracting the glaring focus of entire civilization.

For an hour and a half the congressman held the attention of several hundred persons who braved the elements to hear Mr. Rogers.

The meeting was opened by Agent A. D. Milliken who made brief reference to the course of lectures being given during the winter. The next one, it was announced, will be given on January 12 by former district attorney E. Mark Sullivan, of Boston.

HON. JOHN JACOB ROGERS

The speaker of the evening was presented by M. E. Markell, president of the association.

Taking a piece of chalk in hand and using a blackboard as background the congressman outlined the famous hall quartering the conference, showed the seats occupied by all those present, making appropriate references to each individual as he went along.

After he had given a general survey of the meeting Congressman Rogers picked the statesmen representing the United States as the first delegates he should describe. It would have been a mighty hard task to select a quartet better fitted to represent this nation at the conference than the four men, Messrs. Hughes, Lodge, Root and Underwood, picked to sit at the head of that round table of discussion, the speaker said. He exalted each member of the United States delegation highly and talked at considerable length on the many qualifications the four distinguished statesmen possess.

He referred to each one of the four as "the right man in the right place," and commenting on the opening speech of Mr. Hughes, he said the secretary of state had performed the most extraordinary piece of work possible.

"Secretary Hughes presented a tangible plan right at the outset providing in that way something for the delegates to aim at in a clear and direct light. His address gave the world a new hope for the future, and let me say right here that should the conference succeed, the greater part of the success will be due to Mr. Hughes," Congressman Rogers asserted.

The Foreign Delegates

The speaker gave clear conceptions of the British, French, Italian, and Belgian delegates, at times drawing laughs from the audience by touching on some peculiarity of the foreigners which he particularly noticed while he attended the first few meetings. This was especially true of the Chinese and Japanese representatives and of delegates from smaller countries and possessions of large powers.

"And besides all these delegates, who are sitting, as I have shown, on the four sides of this table," the lecturer continued as he pointed to a diagram he had finished on the board, "there are hundreds of so-called advisors sitting directly behind the men who are representing their country. It is hence a conclusive fact that there will be no scarcity of advice, but I imagine it will be a hard job to listen to all the good counsel those advisors are undoubtedly capable of giving."

Then coming down to the many translators, stenographers and newspaper correspondents swarming tables within the solemn square formed by the longer tables occupied by the delegates, the speaker warned the audience to beware of believing too much of accounts in some of the newspapers. He advised reading the reports of the Associated Press, regarding that service the most reliable and truthful, whereas hundreds of writers for papers throughout the country are wont to lean one way or the other on great vital issues, thus at times spreading propaganda. This latter event is particularly evident in many instances regarding the Chinese problem, he pointed out.

Dwelling on the real issue of the disarmament session the speaker stated that there are three topics before the conference: limitation of navies, limitation of armies, and the Far East problem.

Following an explanation of the 10 year naval holiday and scrapping program outlined by Secretary Hughes, Congressman Rogers opined that such a plan is highly feasible, that it will be accepted by all nations and put in operation. "Public opinion, however, I believe," he added, "goes further in that direction and wants the submarine eliminated as a weapon of piracy."

Army Limitation

Army limitation is very different from naval limitation and that topic needs be treated in a light altogether varied from the previous one, he said.

Outlining the army strength of the various countries Congressman Rogers referred to France as the possessor of the biggest standing army among the so-called great powers, stating that there are at present about a million men ready to take up the country's cause in France. But France, the speaker said, believes she is justified in holding such a vast army. France has a superstitious awe for Germany, and even now, as she did years ago, she still fears raids and destruction at the hands of Germany. Premier Briand, the greatest of French statesmen, came to America long enough to voice in a speech that sounded throughout the world the fear that has been inculcated in the hearts of the French people for years and years. The premier hoped for an American-British alliance, but when he saw that such was out of the question he made known France's desire for a large army and her reasons for asking such a concession.

He called China the stumbling block of tangible results at the conference, and described the general state of chaos now existing in that country as depicted to him by the Chinese representatives at the sitting. The Chinese question is the real problem and just now it is very difficult to see exactly what will come out of it, and what is perhaps most peculiar is the fact that it is even impossible to bound correctly that country known as China.

There are three things of vital interest to the United States at the conference: Protection from invasion, which, however, is the universal vital interest; the Monroe Doctrine; and the open door in China. The latter is also looked on as a topic of vital interest by all nations, the speaker stated.

Moral Disarmament

"Premier Briand, of France, made an excellent statement, in my mind," said Congressman Rogers, "when he said in his address that there must be a moral disarmament before a material disarmament among nations can be effectively put in practice. And he was right. And more than that, there must be sacrifices on the part of all peoples if it is expected that the disarmament program be pursued with success. There are two illustrations that give me bright hope for success. One is the naval treaty that has existed between this country and Canada for 104 years regarding gunboats in the Great Lakes, and the other is the treaty that has been successfully maintained for the last 20 years between Argentina and Chile. What those treaties accomplished, it is my candid opinion, can be done in a worldly scale. The open door of China is the only doubtful question that looms up in my mind and as for that I have hope that something of a successful nature will be arrived at before the conference adjourns.

"It is my sincere belief that this meeting of world statesmen will make the world a better place to live in, and the hour when a treaty binding nations in a disarmament agreement will be passed will indeed be a solemn and glorious one."

The meeting was closed with several vocal selections by the well known "Four Harries" quartet of the company, namely, Harry Patten, C. Harry Howard, Harry Needham, and Harry Pascall.

MASSACHUSETTS MILLS ATHLETIC CLUB

Members of the Massachusetts Mills Athletic association will be given a real treat Friday evening, when for their benefit a boxing exhibition will be staged in the quarters of the organization. The participants in the various bouts will all be employes of the mill, and it is said that the exhibition will be one of the bets of its kind ever conducted by the club. It is the intent and purpose of the association to conduct various social gatherings during the winter season, and its members are receiving the approval of Agent William A. Mitchell.

At a recent meeting of the association bowling was discussed at length, and in order to stimulate this sport in the mill circles it was decided to award prizes every week until Christmas to the team with the highest score. The matter of having the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. supply extra cars to soccer games when the team of the association is playing will be taken up with officials of the company, as the boys feel that if better accommodations were given the attendance at the games would be greater. Soccer, the members of the association claim, is becoming one of the favorite sports in New England, and they feel that before the season is over their team will be rated among the best in New England.

CALL COMING FOR TRACK CANDIDATES

The call for track candidates at the high school will be issued in the course of a few days by Captain Gus Normandin. Although it is a little early for the track season, Gus figures that it is necessary to get the men out earlier this year if they wish to equal the record made by last year's team. Last year the team went through the season without a defeat through the great work of Henry Forrest, Red O'Hare, Gus Cahill, Freddy Ryan and Captain Geggy McAdams. A great hole is left in the team by the graduation of these players.

Nevertheless, the team this year is expected to measure up to the standard of the teams of other years. The L men who are back are Captain Normandin, Sweeney, Jenkins, Hannigan, Bachman, Donahue and Leary. These form the nucleus of what should be a strong team.

MAY HONOR HUFF

It is planned to name the new stadium at Illinois, Huff Field, in honor of George Huff, present director of athletics at that institution. It would be a well deserved tribute to the man who has done more for athletics in Illinois than any other person who could be named.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Adv.

I had two very severe nervous breakdowns, one in early years and again when I was in the forties, and the 'Favorite Prescription' restored me to health and strength each time.

"Also I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and consider it the best blood medicine and building tonic one can take. It renovates and purifies the whole system and makes you feel as though you had a new lease on life."—Mrs. Amanda Case, 801 Becker st.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat Too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jads Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

PEABODY, Nov. 29.—A statement issued by C. P. $25,000 Loss by Fire at Fairholt, N. H.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 29.—A fire which Fire Chief Stockwell of Burlington characterized as of "suspicious origin" was discovered early today in the barn on the farm adjoining Fairholt, the summer residence near here, of Henry Holt, New York publisher, and before it could be gotten under control damaged property and livestock to the amount of $25,000. The barn and several outhouses were destroyed, the garage and other nearby buildings being saved. About 80 animals, including three pure bred Ayrshires, were lost in the flames.

The
U. S. ROYAL CORD TIRE

Unquestionably the outstanding merchandising success of the year—both in the eyes of the trade and of the car-owner.

When the U. S. books close for 1921, they will show U. S. Royal Cord sales nearly doubled over 1920.

What U. S. Tires say and do commands a greater audience than any other line of tires in the world.

Where is the tire dealer headed for in 1922

ALONG about this time of the year the tire-dealer is a much called upon man.

Probably a dozen different "Agencies" for a dozen different tires are hopefully spread before him.

But when he gets off by himself and starts to think he finds out that most so-called Agency Franchises are hardly more than permission to invest his money in this brand or that brand at his own risk.

Consider now—not what is said in behalf of the U. S. Tire Sales and Service Agreement—but what it does.

Consider general conditions for the past year. And note everywhere that U. S. Tire dealers have been the least affected of all.

Observe how generally the U. S. Tire dealer is respected. Not alone by the public but by his local competitors.

The U. S. Tire dealer always knows where he is at. Right now—or in making his plans for 1922.

He can always put his hands on the U. S. consistent merchandising policy.

Where the U. S. Sales Franchise separates from the rest and asserts its prerogatives are in these things—

It brings to the dealer's store the greatest and most loyal tire-audience anywhere.

It supports the dealer with the most constructive and courageous publicly expressed policies today.

It carries the prestige of the U. S. Royal Cord Tire and the "USCO" Tread.

It is the most sought after Franchise in the whole tire trade.

U. S. dealers will be the ranking tire-merchants of 1922. Not only in profits returned, but in local reputation as business citizens.

Prices on all U. S. Tires and Tubes Reduced Nov. 10th. Ask your dealer.

VAINLY OFFERS TO GIVE LAND TO EMPLOYES

LONDON, Nov. 29.—S. F. Edge, a scientific farmer, offered some weeks ago, to hand over farm land valued at £20,000 to a committee of his employes without cost, but subject to the proviso that they should pay their own wages out of the proceeds.

It is announced that they have declined the offer and Mr. Edge has extended it to any reputable labor body, such as the agricultural workers unions.

"The purpose of this offer," said Mr. Edge, when interviewed at his Sussex farm, "is to prove to the trade unions that farming, like every other industry, will only pay wages that are earned, unless they are drawn from capital. Agricultural laborers have been misled as to the profit a farmer makes from corn-growing or ordinary agriculture, and it was to teach them the truth that I made this offer.

"My employes on my farms, which have grown in the last two years from a modest 50 acres to some 2000 acres, have not accepted my offer, knowing that they will make more money in wages than they could make out of the farm.

"I now suggest that one of the farms should be run on a co-operative scheme in charge of the workers and their unions. There would have to be an agreement that accepted methods of good husbandry be observed. It would be possible, of course, to enjoy several years of prosperity by taking everything possible out of the land and putting nothing back. The farm must be kept in good order, fences kept up, ditches drained, land fertilized, and buildings maintained.

"What I am deeply concerned with is that the whole of the land of this country should be farmed at a profit, so that many more families may be employed on pig-breeding, at present by far the most remunerative side of agriculture. We have immense areas of unproductive land. Why should we not connect unproductive land with unemployed people, and make the land produce pigs."

WILL FILL VACANCIES IN BATTERY B

Several vacancies existing in Battery B will be filled this evening. It is expected, when, at the drill session of the outfit at the armory, a physician and recruiting officers will be on hand to examine and probably accept young men desirous of becoming identified with the national guard.

It is also rumored that the number of vacancies now existing may be considerably increased unless some of the absentees put in an appearance in the near future and give explanations for their failures to attend drills. The pay cheques are ready and will be distributed at the drill tonight, it is announced.

Owing to the fact that the armory is closed on Sundays, the regular drill day of the battery, it was stated today that the horses and equipment of the outfit will be removed from the armory to the stables of what was formerly the brewery. The officers plan for Sunday practice on a wider range than it has been carried on heretofore and it is proposed to use the big guns as a regular part of the prescribed drills.

A number of non-commissioned officers will be chosen in a few weeks and candidates for these positions are advised to prepare themselves for the examinations that will be held shortly to determine the fitness of the would-be officers. Selection of these non-coms will be by examination results only, the officers state.

Among the activities of the battery are the bowling and pistol leagues, keen rivalry being developed among the contestants in these two sports. The pistol league is being held in connection with the regular drills, the marks set up by the men being credited to their record. Several teams have been keenly contesting for top honors in the bowling tournament and the entrance of two or three more teams is looked for tonight.

LLOYD GEORGE TO START FOR U. S. ON DEC. 10

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The most likely date for the departure of Premier Lloyd George for the United States to attend the Washington conference is Dec. 10, as well as can be seen at the present moment, according to the London Times.

One suggestion is, the newspaper adds, that it will be possible to arrange with the Sinn Fein for a continuance of the truce over Christmas. It is stated in official quarters that whether the Irish negotiations continue or break down, assuming there is no dangerous crisis to be immediately apprehended, the premier will take the opportunity of making a flying visit to the United States that will involve his absence for about one month.

The Times says that accommodations have been provisionally booked for the premier on all vessels sailing for New York during the next month

DRY PARTY HEAD RAPS PRES. HARDING

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Virgil G. Hinshaw, chairman of the prohibition party called today for vigilance committees to "arise all over the country to co-operate with the enforcement officials." Mr. Hinshaw sounded this note in opening a national prohibition conference and meeting of the prohibition national committee.

"We face a new opportunity, an opportunity to enforce the law that now exists," the prohibition chairman told the conference. "This is our job.

"If we cannot get the administration now in power to lead the way we shall have to elect one that will.

"One of the disappointing things about our president is that he has made no public appeal to the nation to uphold the 18th amendment and he appointed a secretary of treasury conspicuously known as pro-booze.

"However the American people must take things into their own hands."

Mr. Hinshaw, who has just returned from Europe, added that its nations were being flooded with pro-liquor propaganda from America. "Brewers and distillers abroad are fighting by use of the press as though on their last legs," he said.

GERMANS BETTER PAID THAN BEFORE WAR

COBLENZ, Germany, Nov. 29.—Workmen in most parts of Germany are said now to be receiving better wages, everything considered, than prior to the war, and working shorter hours. This is particularly true of the occupied area, according to American army officers who in their line of duty have come in contact with the German working classes.

That the workman is able to live better under present conditions is due, in a large measure, to the fact that strict regulations of food prices has been enforced by German authorities and has prevented shopkeepers from boosting the cost of the necessities of life, despite depreciation in the value of the mark. These regulations apply chiefly to house rent, meat, potatoes and other staples produced within the country.

Many luxuries have increased in price, especially within the last few weeks when the mark took a tumble, but the currency fluctuation has not materially affected food in the markets patronized by the working classes.

One hundred marks a day is considered a fair wage for the average working man, skilled workmen and miners receiving considerably more, some as high as 200 marks a day, while the common laborer makes but 50 or 60 marks for eight hours.

Professors in the universities and school teachers maintain that they have not fared so well as the working man, receiving on an average of less than 80 marks a day.

Since the war, the Germans do not eat as much meat as formerly, potatoes forming the principle article of food. Dark bread in three pound loaves is sold for 7 marks, this being a mixture resembling rye bread as made in America. It is considered very wholesome and it is eaten by many Americans, among them Major General Henry T. Allen, commander of the American forces in Germany who has it on his table at home at every meal.

BOSTON WOMAN AND CHILDREN GRATEFUL TO MAINE DOCTOR

In East Boston, Mass., at 23 Lamson Street, a contented family of three children and the mother live, daily thanking in silence the kind neighbor who helped them when they were sick. Mrs. Nellie Woodfords is the woman and she writes: "Having heard about your medicine from my neighbors and druggist, I wondered if your Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller—wasn't what I needed. I am a hard-working woman, working six hours every day for the Penn Realty Trust Company in Boston. In doing this work I use a lot of strength. Besides this looking after my house and the care of my three children wore me out.

I guess my nerves got out of kilt first. I worried a lot, and seemed to get tired easy. I lost my appetite. I was overtaken with dizzy spells, my eyes got blurred, and I soon found I had to stay home from work. I didn't do any housework, but the rest didn't help.

I always had one special doctor for myself and the children, but he was out of town when I was sick. I took medicine, but nothing did any good. My bowels were out of order. My breath bad, and I was shaky all over. Worst of all the terrible headaches came. It seemed I had suffered years before your Dr. True's Elixir was brought in to me by a neighbor.

After a short time I began to cheer up and be myself again. My bowels were soon in order and I noticed that the dizzy spells had left me. I think Dr. True's Elixir wonderful. I am working every day now, getting stronger and picking up my appetite. I feel full of gratitude toward Dr. True's Elixir.

The children sometimes eat things which don't agree with them, when I am not around to see, and then cramps and constipation follow. I just get out my bottle of Dr. True's Elixir—the family Laxative—and find no trouble in getting them to take some.

It is easy to take. Their bowels are soon all right. It may interest you to know that recently my youngest child was terribly sick and it was a serious case. We all have Dr. True's Elixir to thank for relieving her of stomach worms. When I gave it to Louise it acted like magic, and fixed her up only after two doses."

Signs of worms are: Constipation, swollen upper lip, deranged stomach, offensive breath, and occasional pains, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, short dry coughs, grinding of the teeth, little red points sticking out on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

If your children show any of these symptoms, start giving Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller.

It has done wonders for children and grownups since 1851. Internationally known. Get the Family Size of Dr. True's Elixir, the Family Laxative and Worm Expeller.

LLOYD GEORGE COMING

It is reported from London that Premier Lloyd George has arranged to sail on the Aquitania, which leaves Liverpool next Saturday for New York. That announcement, if true, is rather significant on account of its bearing upon the Washington conference and the negotiations for a settlement of the Irish question.

In some quarters it is feared that the Irish negotiations are at the point of collapse on account of the obstinacy of Ulster. We do not believe anything of the kind for the reason that Lloyd George has the overwhelming support of both parties in parliament in carrying the negotiations to a certain finality. On the other hand the entire British press including many papers that have always been opposed to Ireland's interests, are now a unit in declaring that the warfare against Ireland must not be renewed. That means that the question must be settled because if it be not, the Irish would renew their efforts to drive out the government officials and this would compel England to use force and thus renew the warfare in some form.

It is a well known fact that Ulster is now the chief stumbling block because the leaders of that province assume an importance to which they are not entitled by their numbers or their industrial status. They will do some shouting and threatening as they did on many former occasions; but they will finally yield to the inevitable, just as they did in Gladstone's day when they said they would kick the crown into the river Boyne. Lord Northcliffe has cabled from the antipodes that Ulster will never again have a more favorable opportunity to settle this trouble than at present. The question may be settled this week; but if not, Lloyd George can bring Ulster to terms any time he sees fit even without threats of coercion by force.

Lloyd George, Lord Curzon and other British statesmen realize that a smashup of the negotiations for an Irish peace might defeat the British movement for closer relations with the United States and for some mode of mitigating the war loans that may never call for payment. In spite of all that has been said against this proposition, it seems to bob up occasionally, and is evidently still in the minds of European statesmen as a possible result of the present arms conference.

Moreover, when Lloyd George comes here he is likely to succeed in settling international policies that are now held in the air as it were, because the parties at interest cannot agree upon the concrete form such settlements should assume. Japan balks at the 5-5-3 proposition for naval reduction and wants it changed to 10-10-7, which would mean that the Japanese navy would be 70 per cent. of that of England or of the United States instead of 60 per cent. The Chinese problem is also in a state of confusion and on both these questions Lloyd George would probably suggest some practical mode of settlement that would be acceptable to all concerned. He is likely also to fall in line with the idea of an Association of Nations for disarmament, if he cannot get the United States to join the League of Nations pledged definitely to the objects sought by the Harding plan but very much more specific on all points.

AUTO BANDITS

Bandits riding in high-powered machines have more than an even chance of getting away with their loot nowadays. Undoubtedly highwaymen of the old days of Duval and Sixteen-String Jack, or even the lowly Jesse James and his thrilling crew of roving thieves, would view with amazement and real envy the bandits who strike for booty on our highways in these days of gasoline-driven vehicles. The Chelsea robbery, nervy as it was, is nothing new. There has been an actual wave of crime of this sort in America during the last three months. Sociologists may differ as to the reason for the sudden increase in crimes of this kind, but the facts are undisputed. Robbing the mails has put the government on guard. The amount of funds stolen by thieves from post-offices and mail wagons during the year ending last April, for instance, reached a sum of more than $5,000,000. How long is this rich harvest to continue?

Arming pay-roll carriers does not seem to prevent these crimes. Witness the Chelsea robbery with all its thrilling details. Armed bank messengers mean nothing in the opinion of the auto-riding bandits, evidently. The money car of the Boston bank carried armed men supposed to be ready for instant battle with thieves, yet these men, paid to guard the money in their possession, were caught off their guard. They could not have been prepared for a hold-up, and yet that is what they were hired for. Of what real use after all were those so-called "guards" whose only duty at the time they are carrying large amounts of money is to be on the lookout every moment for just such a deed? Surprised "off their guard," as the dispatches tell us, they threw up their hands and the bandits got the money.

If banks must employ armed guards to protect their money, it appears to be necessary to engage the right kind of men. Of what possible use are men paid to protect funds, if their guns are in some inside pocket, as was the case in the Chelsea hold-up? The only joke in this is on the so-called "guards." They were apparently not on guard last Saturday.

PERFECTED PRIMARY LAW

Sometime, perhaps, we shall have a primary law perfected along the lines suggested by The Sun, by the addition of one or two nominating committees whose duty it will be to name municipal tickets to be put before the voters in conjunction with the independent candidates at the primaries.

Under the old charter, the primaries, or caucuses, as they were then called, merely elected delegates to party nominating conventions, each of which named its municipal ticket for mayor and aldermen. One was democratic and one republican; and at the final election sometimes one ticket was chosen entire, and at others the leading men of both tickets were elected.

There has been much criticism of having party lines drawn in municipal politics; but it can be said that the system always brought out strong and capable men for the leading offices. We need some system that will attain the same results without reviving partisanship in city politics. Even under the present system, in which partisanship is barred, we find some people singling out democrats from republicans, members of one denomination from those of another and suggesting such lines as a basis of selection. It would indeed be unfortunate and to say the least most injurious to the city's business, if municipal elections were swayed and officials chosen on sectional lines rather than the essential quality of fitness for the position to be filled.

RED CROSS SEALS

Tuberculosis kills every third person between 15 and 60.

This terrible creeping disease last year killed 132,000 Americans. The figure would have been 210,000, if it had not been for the active fight against tuberculosis that started 20 years ago.

Healthers say that the war against tuberculosis is saving at least 75,000 lives a year.

The greatest weapon in this warfare is the Red Cross Christmas Seal. The Red Cross this year wants the public to buy $32,000,000 of these stamps. The public should respond by buying 10 times that many.

Unemployment and housing congestion are powerful allies of the tuberculosis germ. The need for a big sale of Red Cross Seals this year is greater than ever before.

Put a seal on every letter and parcel you mail. Make it more—two or three. Thereby you will save lives and protect yourself against tuberculosis.

FRANCE'S POSITION

And now patriotic France of valorous deeds is accused by certain European statesmen of exhibiting "green-eyed jealousy" in her struggle for safety and border line rights. Is France jealous? And of whom? Surely not of England or Italy. And America cannot be held responsible after that "open door" speech of Mr. Hughes.

Is France beginning to fear once more the smashing prosperity of the Fatherland in the newest trade war? France may not agree to disarmament in great measure, but she cannot help but envy her late powerful enemy who is busily at work harvesting many of the best fruits of war, with Switzerland in the background holding the profits for safely first purposes.

THE STORM

Not our oldest resident can recall a snow and hail storm that caused one-fifth as much damage to trees and overhead wires as the present. The wreckage to trees is beyond anything that has hitherto been conceived as possible from any such storm. Whole streets are rendered impassable either from fallen boughs of trees or from the trees bowed down with weight of ice so as to touch the surface and completely close the thoroughfares. The damage to fruit trees will be lamentable.

At least do some of your Christmas shopping early. It will help someone somewhere, and these are times when help of the friendly and personal sort goes a long way in the marts of trade.

New York writer of the Greenwich village school wants America to "resume her normal spirit of sympathy with constructive revolution." More propaganda?

After all, isn't a nation really a mutual insurance company organized to protect its citizens against violence? Every citizen should be not only a policyholder but a shareholder.

Disarmament conference critics now say that the delegates "may arrive at an agreement pointing to international solidarity." Which might mean almost anything.

Must Russia turn at last to hated capitalism before it can hope to become fit for international economic relations?

Cheery Denis McCarthy, "poet of the millions," says it is hard to "write good poetry." He has traveled the road and ought to know.

It doesn't take much snow to make ideal sliding for the young folks when the temperature is right and the thin ice stays put.

Australia comes to the front with continued improvement in government finances that were sorely depleted a few years ago.

Sink the submarines? Well, revolvers are dangerous weapons, too, but they are sometimes handy to have around.

The auto bandits must wonder how those "armed guards" riding on pay roll wagons manage to keep their jobs.

Organized labor is not afraid to take a definite stand in favor of the limitation of armaments. Next!

SEEN AND HEARD

Do your sidewalk cleaning early, too!

Every postoffice is a department store annex these days.

Expunging remarks from the Congressional Record is Washington's latest fad.

That 5-5-3 ratio sounds something like 4-11-44 to some of the disarmament delegates.

Foch even got a membership card in the Stone Cutters' and Bricklayers' union, and that's real friendship.

The restaurant man who failed because he wouldn't serve customers who didn't wear full evening dress, should start a grand opera company with every seat in the golden circle.

A New Jersey woman who has been elected justice of the peace says that she will kiss the bridegroom instead of the bride at the marriages she solemnizes.

The moon is getting nearer to the earth at a speed of about 14 feet in 200 years. Astronomers up to the present have not been able to explain why this is so.

Settled at Last

It was at the theatre and the young man had seen the play before. He let everybody for four seats around know that and he kept saying what was coming and just how funny it would be when it did come. He had a pretty girl with him and he was trying to amuse her. At length he said: "Did you ever try listening to a play with your eyes shut? You've no idea how queer it seems." A middle-aged man with a red face sat just in front. He twisted himself in his seat and stared at the young man. "Young man," said he, "did you ever try listening to a play with your mouth shut?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Poetical Competition

It was at a dance and she had just been introduced to a "rising young poet." "O, it must be lovely to be able to write poetry!" she cooed. "How much do you get for your poems, Mr. Raeme?" "I've gotten as high as $5," admitted young Mr. Raeme with pride. "O!" she cried disappointedly. "Isn't that very little? I was reading that Sir Walter Scott got $500 for one of his." "Ah!" replied Archie Raeme. "Writing poetry isn't the business it was before the war. There's too much competition."

An Obscure Artist

Harvey Maitland Watts, the Philadelphia art critic, said at a dinner in Rittenhouse square: "The ignorance of the new rich in art matters is quite incredible. The wife of a newly rich professor was buying pictures in a Walnut street shop the other day. After she had bought a number of costly pictures she said: 'Now show me something a little cheaper for the back hall. It's dark there.' The salesman brought out another picture. 'This, madam,' he said, 'is only a chromo, and we could let you have it for nearly nothing.' The new-rich lady nodded in a sage way. 'Yes, of course,' she said, 'Chromo is a struggling and obscure artist, and he can't expect to command good prices till he makes a popular hit, can he?'"

In the Cherokee Strip

William Allen White, the Kansas editor, told a homestead story at a Topeka dinner. "Along a hot and dusty Kansas road," he began, "a homesteader was pursuing his way toward one of Uncle Sam's free homes in the Cherokee strip. His family and furniture were in a shaky wagon drawn by a pair of shaky nags. 'Whar ye bound?' a farmer asked him when he halted to water up. 'Bound?' Why, bound for a hun'erd and sixty acres o' gov'ment land in the strip,' the homesteader answered enthusiastically. Some two or three months passed, and the homesteader stopped once more at the farmer's to water up, this time traveling north. 'Wot ye done with them 160 acres?' said the farmer. 'See them mules?' the homesteader answered, pointing to the sorry animals that were harnessed to his prairie schooner. 'Well, I traded 80 acres of my claim for 'em.'

"'Wot ye done with the other 80?'

"'Don't give it away till I get further on,' said the homesteader in a low voice, 'but the feller was a tenderfoot, and I run the other $6 in on him without his knowin' it.'"—Detroit Free Press.

"Your Nose Knows"

My little nose knew when I got to "the store"—
Stores haven't that wonderful smell, any more!
There was odor of shirting and kerosene blent;
There was bouquet de sorghum and brown sugar scent;
There was butter aroma—not always the best—
And chewing gum smells that put thrills in the breast.
While hovering 'round the plug-cutting machine
The smell of tobacco could almost be seen.
There was attar of spices of every kind
That busy importers could anywhere find;
There were smells of new boots—both of rubber and leather
To meet with our needs in all species of weather;
Machine grease was rife in the hardware division—
The fields it suggested were scarcely Elysian!
The blindest of blind men could instantly tell He'd come to that general store, by the smell.

(These new fangled stores are departmentized so Scarce even the wisest of noses could know
A shop was about it, excepting by chance
The perfume department the smell should enhance.
The eyes and the ears must be called on today
To name the location, by night or by day.
But back in your childhood—and my childhood too—
Our freckled and turned-up proboscises knew!)

THE LORD MAYOR "WEIGHS IN"

In some sections of England they still cling to the old custom of publicly weighing the lord mayor when he is inaugurated. Maybe it's in line with the old adage "weighed and found wanting." Or maybe it's to see how much he will gain while mayor. This picture shows G. H. Taylor being weighed as he begins his term as lord mayor of an English city.

MAN ABOUT TOWN

I don't believe there was a thoroughfare in the business section of the city in worse condition Monday during the great storm than Market street. At places there was easily a foot of water making passage by foot absolutely dangerous. At the crossing leading to the police and court building it was impossible to cross until some kind soul dug up several planks and used them to bridge the deeper pools of slush. But I presume this was but a mild form of the conditions farther outward.

The Man About Town hears that "great doings" are promised those who attend the annual meeting and dinner of the New England Alumni Association of Phillips Exeter academy, in Boston, next Thursday evening. There are numerous members of the association in and about Lowell, not all of whom will be able to attend the meeting, but who always send greetings to the "old bunch." Among the speakers at the banquet will be President James Rowland Angell of Yale and "Bill" Bingham, track coach at Harvard. Exonians from all over New England are planning to attend the reunion, I am told.

I notice that Portland, Me., bakeries are cutting prices, too—the third cut within a year. They have just taken five cents from the price of all pies and nicked the tax on 20-ounce loaves of bread one cent. Pies were formerly 35 cents and large loaves 15 cents. They are making larger doughnuts—filling up the holes, as it were.

The patriotic young men of this vicinity who attended the citizens' military training camp at Camp Devens last summer, will be interested to learn that Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait of Boston was last week raised to the rank of brigadier-general in the medical reserve corps of the United States army. Dr. Goldthwait was one of the principal contributors to the success of the citizen's military training camp at Devens and the value of his service as an orthopedic surgeon before and during the war is recognized throughout the country.

These are busy days for the fraternal lodges in Lowell and vicinity. Elections and installations are coming, inspection visits are due from many "high" state officials, and the general rank and file of most of the Lowell lodges have their hands full preparing for banquets and receptions. Lowell council, Royal Arcanum, is to have as visitor Thursday evening, H. B. Richardson, S.D.G.R., of district 10, always welcome in this city.

Employes of the Wamesit and Bay State woolen mills read with more than ordinary interest the announcement Saturday of the promotion of Andrew B. Walls, Jr., to be the agent of the Weybosset mills, succeeding David A. Haig, resigned. Mr. Walls was formerly assistant agent of the Wood worsted mills in Lawrence. He won many friends while there, and was very popular among the workmen and women, and especially a favorite at the summer outings of the mill employes, when he always had his picture taken with "the crowd" before the ice cream was served. The Lawrence mill outings are getting to be a regular thing every year now, I hear.

The shutting down of the American Hide and Leather company plant on Ferry street has caused not a little surprise in local mill circles, coming at a time when the hide and leather market is showing quite an improvement. Reports from leather centers indicate that there is a dearth in supplies of desirable grades of leather and a broadening in demand for upper leather to include the better grades which have been rather quiet. The market is practically bare of "light hides," shoe men say. Higher grade goods are in far better demand than they were six months ago. One feature of the shoe-making industry regarded as most unusual at this time is the report from western and southern manufacturers, who claim to be "full up" on orders. They are apparently making the most of their present advantage in manufacturing costs, while New England shoe manufacturers still linger on the labor problem and do not appear to be making much headway.

In ancient Roman times, music and dancing formed an important part of a girl's education.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

Life's Refuge

The mason nursed a broken heart
A broken heart he could not fix,
But, practicing his trade and art,
He lost his woe in laying bricks.

The architect was wrapped in grief,
As deep a grief as any man's,
Till in his work he found relief
And lost his sorrow in his plans.

The great composer bathed in woe,
He moaned his trouble, night and noon,
But there was work to do—and so
He lost his sorrow in a tune.

The poet's soul was filled with murk,
A darkness black as any curse,
Till in despair he turned to work
And lost his sorrow in his verse.

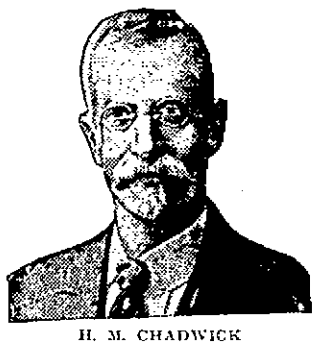

Yet architect, composer, bard
And mason, cursed the daily need
That drove them to their labors hard;
Ah, men are silly folk indeed!

PUTS PEP INTO A MAN

Says Mr. Chadwick When He Is Run-Down, Tired Out And Worn Out

H. M. CHADWICK

Urbana, Ill.—"I am a Locomotive Engineer, and was run-down, tired, worn-out, dragged out and had no 'pep.' I have a family of four, but I felt so badly I could not work. My druggist told me about Vinol, and I found it to be just the right medicine for my trouble. I took five bottles and I gained in weight and health so I feel like a new man. Vinol cannot be beat to put 'pep' into a man. It is certainly a great strength builder and I have found it to be all that it is recommended. H. M. Chadwick, Urbana, Ill.

The reason Vinol restored Mr. Chadwick to health so quickly is because he needed the blood-making, strength creating elements of iron and beef, peptones contained in Vinol, together with the tissue building principles of the concentrated cod liver extractives. $1.00 per bottle, guaranteed.—Adv.

OBLIGATIONS OF THE WAR

Frank A. Vanderlip Discusses Allies' Eleven Billion Dollar Debt to U. S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Recognition by the allies of their eleven billion dollar debt to America as a just debt, agreement by this country to easy payments and the money thus repaid to be used in rehabilitating Europe, was a plan proposed last night by Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker, for settling the obligations of the war.

Mr. Vanderlip, who returned recently from Europe where he made an exhaustive study of economic conditions, spoke before the Economic club. He said he had discussed the debt with the leading responsible government ministers and financiers of Europe, and nearly every nation admitted inability to pay.

The United States would be hurt as much by the rapid receipt of payment in the form of goods, the only possible form of payment in view of the demoralization of foreign exchange, he said, as the allied debtors would be harmed in making the payment.

"The full consequences would be profound," he said, "if the payments could be made and were made with any degree of promptness. We need not look further than to contemplate merely the receipt of $500,000,000 a year of interest. If that came in the form of goods our industrial situation would be upset in a way and to an extent we have not heretofore experienced. The effect upon our labor situation and the consequent social problems which would be raised, would be menacing."

As the first postulate in his plan, Mr. Vanderlip said he would lay down the principle that the allied debt was a just debt, legally and morally, and whether it could be paid or not, it should be cheerfully and gratefully acknowledged as a just debt.

"Next, I would want America to be both an intelligent and a lenient creditor," he continues. "Terms of payment ought to be adapted to the means of our debtors. In that respect we should take the action of the allies in fixing the terms of the indemnity as an example to be avoided rather than followed.

"The crux of my plan would lie in the disposition of the payments.

"I would have America make a beau jeste; a grand gesture in international relationships. While demanding that the payment be made, I would have America that she is prepared for the present to forego the receipt of it."

Concerning what would be done with the money paid back, Mr. Vanderlip said:

"I would like to see every dollar that can ever be paid to us by our debtors for years to come, devoted to the rehabilitation of European civilization. It is only through such rehabilitation that these debts can ever conceivably be paid. It is only through the rehabilitation of European civilization that America can ever conceivably realize in full measure her destiny, or can expect a full measure of prosperity for her people."

He believed a plan for the development of Eastern Europe could be laid out, he said, comparable to the vision our forefathers had when the latent possibilities of our great west were unfolded to their minds.

"Everything the war has cost," he added, "everything an unwise peace is costing, can be recompensed, and beyond that a great economic margin created, if Eastern Europe can be put in order, can be helped and led wisely to handle its own problems, if the people of Eastern Europe can be made to comprehend their economic unity, if they can be brought to understand that in the welfare of all nations lies the highest prosperity of each."

To a program of this kind, he declared, he would devote for many years every dollar this country could get of the allies' debt.

"We need not make an irrevocable decision when we embark on this program. For a good many years, I believe it would be wise for us to devote all we receive to such purposes as I have suggested. It is entirely possible, however, that there would come such economic restoration that in the end, a considerable part, conceivably nearly all of the principal, might be paid to us. Interest money that we loaned and re-loaned for economic development would be converted from the original obligation of the allies to obligations representing material properties which we created, and probably backed by the obligations of the governments of those countries where this economic development took place. The time might come when we would cease to make these sums revolving credits for European economic development, because there really would not be further need for us to do so. Then the money would come back to us.

"I am firmly convinced that in the great catastrophe the war has brought, there has been created an opportunity which could never otherwise have arisen. The obstacles which have arisen in the path of European civilization can be turned into stepping-stones leading to a position vastly better than anything Europe has ever known. The war has made a great awakening in millions of dormant minds. It is possible that newly awakened impulses, if they can be harnessed to the machinery of production and distribution, can result in a great actual improvement of civilization. That awakening, those impulses, are now disconnected from any machinery of commerce, and they may all be lost in a decaying civilization. We can help to turn them to account. The possibilities that there are in society for realizing better conditions for all humanity are undreamed of. The opportunity has arisen to make these possibilities realities.

SAYS RUSSIA WILL BE ON HER FEET IN 5 YEARS

MOSCOW, Nov. 25.—(By a Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press)—Russia will be on her feet again and take her place among the wealth-producing nations of the world within the next four or five years, says Bela Kun, formerly Hungarian communist leader. He is now living with his wife and child in a small house attached to a hospital in the outskirts of Moscow.

He writes for the communistic press, is active in the Third Internationale and is well thought of in the councils of the "Big Five," who control affairs in Russia namely, Lenine, Trotsky, Kaminiev, Djerzinsky and Boukharin.

It will be recalled that Bela Kun was head of the communist government in Hungary for five months in the spring and summer of 1919 and had to flee when the Rumanian army invaded the country and completed the wreckage wrought by the world war. To the correspondent of The Associated Press he said:

"We are on the right road now, here in Russia. I am not speaking as an official of the soviet republic, but it is evident that the new economic policy will succeed. Russia will 'come back' in four or five years.

"You have just been through Russia. You see how rich she is, rich as the United States in forests, in soil, in mines. Her people have broken down the old feudalism. They are at last free. They are being educated, and that is wealth, too.

"Surely, such a country should have a better chance of repaying foreign investments than bankrupt countries of western Europe lacking Russia's natural resources.

"The government here is finished with revolutions and is growing more stable and will and can protect foreign investments. Industrial or social revolutions may come elsewhere but we are through with them.

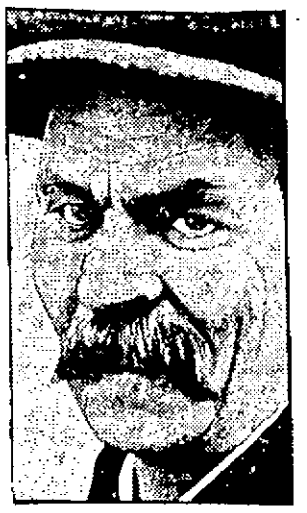

"Communism has not failed. Until now we were running a sort of war communism and we were hit by the Entente blockade too. With peace, the government will continue to control and own the great industries, and in the end will absorb all but the smaller ones. That doesn't mean there isn't room for foreign concessions, Russia is so big.

"We are not getting around to a democratic government like that of the United States. We are doing better. We are working to liberate the workers and try to prevent their exploitation.

"In considering business hazards with Russia, let the American business men remember that so far the United States has obtained only nice bits of paper, promises to pay from France, England and Italy, on the huge sums loaned there."

Bela Kun is working to overcome the famine which he fears may extend far into the next year, partly because of the lack of seed grain, which the soviet government can't provide in sufficient quantities, partly due to the hazards of weather. He is pushing the plan of an international loan to be launched through trade unions the world over. The plan is to have the soviet government guarantee the loan, to be issued in bonds from one dollar up.

Bela Kun believes that persons who might not otherwise subscribe to famine charity would buy these bonds, in the hope of their redemption, five or ten years hence, when the Russian government has recovered its financial credit.

PLEASE WRITE!

Mary Tindall would dearly like to hear from her uncles, her mother's brothers—their name was Ryan—and from her own brother—his name was Daniel O'Connor—who emigrated years ago to America. They all used to live near Drury Lane. And she'd thank them kindly if they wrote a letter to her at 38 Doon street, London.

INGROWN TOE NAIL TURNS OUT ITSELF

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless, antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions. —Adv.

Take It In Time!

DO you know that by far the larger number of the common ailments of women are not surgical ones; that is they are not caused by any serious displacement, tumor, growth, or other marked change?

DO you know that these common ailments produce symptoms that are very much like those caused by the more serious surgical conditions?

DO you know that many women and young girls suffer needlessly from such ailments? More than that, they endanger their health by allowing their ailments to continue and develop into something serious.

If treated early, that is, within a reasonable time after the first warning symptoms appear, serious conditions may often be averted. Therefore, at the first appearance of such symptoms as periodic pains, irregularities, irritability and nervousness, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken. It is prepared with accuracy and cleanliness from medicinal plants. It contains no narcotics nor poisonous drugs, and can be taken with perfect safety.

The Vegetable Compound acts on the conditions which bring about these symptoms in a gentle and efficient manner. The persistent use of it shows itself in the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms. In a word, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts as a natural restorative, relieving the present distress and preventing more serious trouble.

Why not give a fair trial to this medicine

She's Been Shelling Peas for 50 Years But Never Saw Peas Growing

MARY O'CONNOR TINDALL ON THE JOB.

BY MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Says the champion pea-sheller of the world:

"I've been shelling peas every spring and summer for 50 years.

"I've shelled 'em for the grandmother and father of King George, for all the finest people, for all the big hotels, for all the smart restaurants of London. But—

"In all that time I've never been out of London! I've never been out in God's open country where peas grew. I've never seen peas on the vine before they were picked."

Fifty years ago the mother of Mary O'Connor brought her little girl to the Bailey Market in Covent Garden, where shelled peas are a specialty. She apprenticed the child to a famous pea-sheller. And Mary's been shelling peas ever since.

Meanwhile she was married to a market employe named Tindall and reared a family of nine. She saw her children die, one by one, save two. And still she kept at the old job.

Of her royal customers she says:

"King George likes little young peas. Those that go to the palace are of one size and one age. They're put through a sieve first and carefully graded.

"I've often wished I could see them at the palace, eating my peas and talking about them."

BOUQUETS FOR DRY MISSIONARY

"Pussyfoot" Johnson got a less stormy reception in India than the Prince of Wales did. When he landed in Calcutta to tell the natives about the curse of drink he was wreathed with garlands of flowers, the native way of saying "Welcome to Our City."

Capt. Gordon Found Guilty

CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 28. Herbert Gordon, former captain of police, was found guilty today of charges preferred against him as a result of testimony at the trial at which Nathan A. Tufts was removed from office as district attorney of Middlesex county. Gordon was assigned to duty in the district attorney's office prior to his dismissal as a member of the force on Nov. 5. Chief of Police McBride announced that guilt had been proved on charges that he attempted to bribe Lewis ("Poco") Bennett, a prisoner, to pay money to obtain his parole.

Youth Electrocuted by Falling Wire

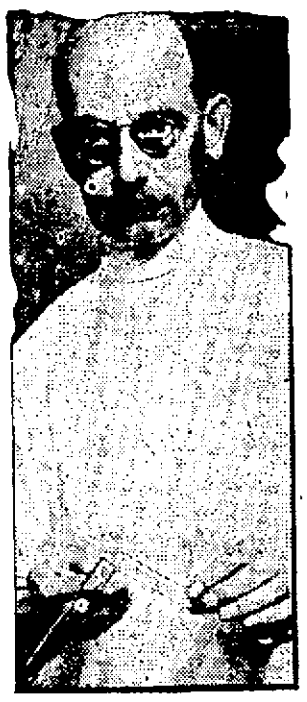

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Nov. 28.—Salvatore Collara, 18, of South Bellingham, Mass., was electrocuted this morning when he grasped a falling ice-coated electric feed cable and tossed it aside to save his younger brother while they were on their way to work in the mills here. The accident occurred on Centre street, just over the line from this city.

NEW GERM IS DECLARED CAUSE OF ANEMIA

BY N. E. A. SERVICE

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 28.—Anemia is not a symptom, but a disease like tuberculosis, claims Dr. Phillip Rahtjen, A. M., Ph. D., prominent Pasadena bacteriologist.

To prove his assertion, Dr. Rahtjen has isolated an entirely new germ, which he says is the anemia germ, a sort of microscopic vampire, and which he discovered by accident when he was asked to examine several hundred rabbits which had died of mysterious malady.

In his examination, Dr. Rahtjen isolated a germ unknown to him. Being personally acquainted with over 5000 individual species, his curiosity was aroused and he began to investigate.

Confirms Theory

Sometime later, the sputum of a human being was sent to him for examination and in it he discovered the same germ. This patient was suffering from pernicious anemia. He then found the same germ in every anaemic person he examined.

Pursuing his investigations still further, Dr. Rahtjen discovered that he could obtain a serum by immunizing goats, and now claims that injection of this serum effected an almost instantaneous cure.

Some authorities claim that 50 per cent of Americans today suffer from this devitalizing malady, and in some foreign countries the proportion is greater than ever.

Formerly blood transfusion was regarded the only method for anemia, and this, in a majority of cases, failed.

BRIEF BUT IMPORTANT WIRE DESPATCHES

M.C.A. college at Springfield, Mass., issued a detailed denial that Mark Glanville, an English alien, and his wife and baby had been improperly treated on passage through the immigration station at Ellis Island.

COPY OF REVENUE ACT

Copy of Act Approved by President Harding Received Here Yesterday

A copy of the Revenue Act for 1921 approved and signed by President Harding at 3.55 p. m. on November 23, has been received by local federal officers.

There are many new changes, but the act is so complicated the local officials will want a few days at least to digest the text before giving out much information about the changes. While the bill has been passed and signed it will not become generally effective until Jan. 1, 1922.

There are one or two radical changes which are clearly understood, and which will make a big change as far as the general public is concerned. These deal with the filing of married and single men's returns and gross income returns of individuals.

According to the rule for 1921, a single man filed on an income of $1000 or over and was allowed exemption of $1,000, while a married man filed on $2,000 or over and was allowed that amount exemption. In addition to this he was allowed $200 exemption for every minor child. Both the single and married men must file if their incomes are over $1,000 under the new law, but the married man will be allowed an exemption of $2500. He will be allowed $400 for each minor child.

The matter of filing on individual gross incomes will make the biggest difference both to the individual and to the tax collector. Under the heading marked "Individual Returns" the third paragraph of Section 223 says: "Every individual having a gross income for the taxable year of $5,000 or over, regardless of the amount of his net income." This comes under the general definition of who shall be required to file.

This section alone means that nearly every business must make a return. It is few places of business which do not have a weekly total of $100 in sales which would bring the mark up over the $5,000 point.

The local officers will have more information to give out in a short while regarding the new regulations and it is expected information will reach the public in ample time for them to understand what is required of them in their duty towards the federal government.

TO JOIN OBLATE ORDER

Fr. Murray Leaves St. Margaret's Parish—Fr. O'Brien His Successor

Rev. Stephen G. Murray, for the past several years assistant to Rev. Charles J. Galligan, pastor of St. Margaret's church, will enter the Oblate Novitiate at Tewksbury on Wednesday to begin a course of study with a view of becoming a member of the Oblate order.

Fr. Murray made application to His Eminence, Cardinal O'Connell for a leave of absence for one year and his request was granted last week.

The departure of Fr. Murray from St. Margaret's will cause considerable regret among the parishioners, where he became extremely popular since his assignment there. He was spiritual director of the Ladies' sodality and was a zealous worker in the interest of parish activities. He has done a splendid work in his management of social affairs and he enters the missionary field with the best wishes of the pastor and parishioners.

Fr. Murray will be succeeded by Rev. Andrew F. O'Brien, now stationed in Roxbury.

THOUSANDS OF PHONES OUT OF COMMISSION

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Wire communication was more affected today as a result of the storm than any storm for years. One-third of the direct telephone lines to New York were out of commission and toll service in every direction was seriously interrupted. Thousands of subscribers' lines throughout New England also were made useless.

New breaks were being reported almost as rapidly as others were repaired, the telephone company officials said. It was estimated that the storm would cost the company approximately half a million dollars.

Most of the trouble with the Western Union Telephone Co equipment was within a radius of 50 miles from Boston. Trunk lines to New York and the west and also east to Bangor, were working but communication with nearer places such as Worcester, Lowell Manchester and Concord, N. H. was cut off by the fall of poles and wires heavily coated with ice. Crews of repairmen with auto trucks and in some cases with special trains were sent out from this city.

STEAMER PORTLAND WAS LOST IN SIMILAR STORM

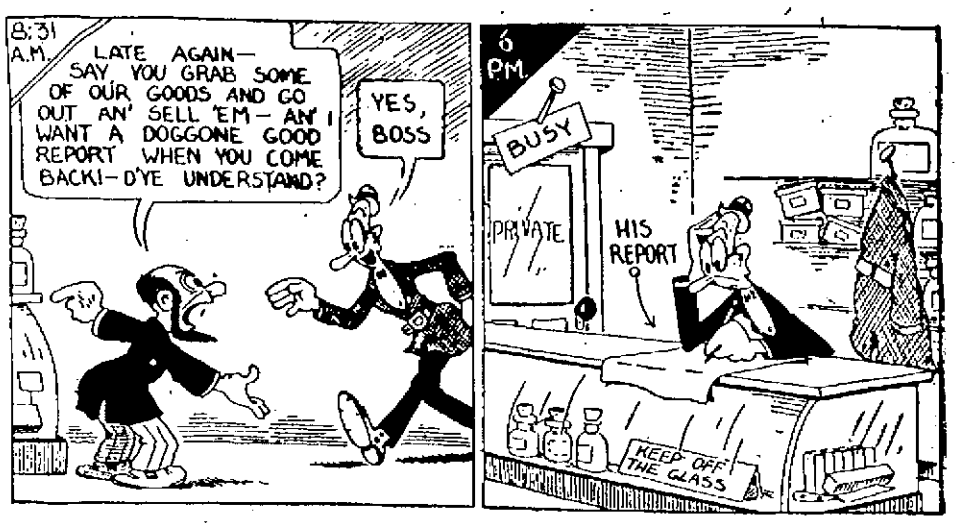

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 28.—The storm in which the steamer Portland was lost off Cape Cod with about 150 passengers 23 years ago Saturday night, while bound to Portland from Boston, was recalled by the present disturbance. Like this one, it began on a Saturday night and continued for several days, with high winds, snow and sleet. None was saved, but later a number of bodies and some wreckage were washed ashore.

The fall of snow, which amounted to more than a foot, up to noon, was interspersed with sleet squalls today with no let up in sight. Street car service had not been seriously handicapped, but much difficulty was encountered on the various suburban lines.

Coast guard stations reported a 40-mile gale blowing out of the northeast. Extra precautions were being taken to guard against loss of life or property, and the coast guard cutter Ossipee was standing by with her crew ready for any emergency that might arise.

The storm was responsible for more than 200 jobless men finding temporary employment. The free employment bureau of the chamber of commerce placed half of this number.

Orange velvet in long straight lines, high throat and fur waist band give this Poiret gown a quite distinctive charm.

MISS FRAZER AT WOMEN'S CLUB

Middlesex Women's Club Members Hear One of Britain's Noted Women Orators

Sidelights on Personalities in British Politics—England's Naval Policy

Miss Helen Frazer, one of Britain's foremost women orators, addressed the Middlesex Women's club at its weekly meeting yesterday, and despite a rather small attendance, due to the adverse weather conditions, the lecture was one of the most interesting of the season. Miss Frazer addressed the club some three years ago on War Work, and her subject yesterday was "Some Personalities in British Politics," a subject she should be very familiar with, since she is soon to return to stand for parliament.

Miss Frazer first spoke of the various parties existing in England, and the events which led up to the formation of the coalition ministry during the war. Just now, she said, it is felt in England that Lloyd George's party has too large a majority. She thought that Americans would not understand this policy, but the English felt that well-organized and powerful opposition acted as a restraint on the party in control.

She discussed Lloyd George's personality at length and interestingly. She dwelt on his charm of manner, and his ability to win others to his point of view. He has a very real sense of humor and gets the best of his enemies through ridicule.

She described Arthur Balfour as the rare man who could come nearest attaining Rao Kipling's poem, "If." She gave illustrations of his extreme abstraction.

Winston Churchill has a half-dozen personalities, according to the speaker, and is a brilliant, but not a reliable, leader.

She said that Austin Chamberlain suffered from having a brilliant father. He himself is not an altogether arresting figure.

Asquith is a cold speaker, but has great ability in choosing words and stating a case. He is not a great leader, lacking driving force, and has been harmed greatly by his wife's book.

She explained the status of the "wild men" of the labor party and the anti-waste candidates of the Northcliffe group.

The advent of women members of parliament was taken up by the speaker. There are two of these at present, one of them the former-American, Lady Astor, described as very witty and brilliant, and possessing moral courage which allows her to say whatever she wishes. Both these women took over their husbands' places, and the goal at present is to send in women whose husbands have not preceded them, thus avoiding entangling alliances.

Speaking briefly on the Irish question, she said England does not state her side of the case in this country because they do not want to make the United States a battleground for her problems. She asserted, however, that the whole country was united in the resolve that the union should not be broken. They take the same view as Lincoln did relative to the dissolution of the union in this country, and said that our country was a shining example of the doctrine that people of many nations and creeds can live together harmoniously under one flag. They intend, however, to be as lenient and generous toward Ireland as possible. Accession to Ireland's demands would speedily lead to demands of a similar nature from Egypt and India. She said that she hoped for a satisfactory solution of the Irish question.

She spoke of England's naval policy, saying that there was never a right by divine command to rule the seas, but the British navy had often served to protect the peace of the world. The British dominions possessed a greater extent of coast line than the United States. The fact that her country is now willing to see our navy as great as its own is proof of absolute trust. There is a mutual distaste for aggressive action.

She expressed a belief that the present conferences in Washington will lead to a better understanding between the two countries, and the achievement of this will be a great step forward in the task of world betterment and the good of civilization in the future.

BIG MASS MEETING

Great Reception Planned for Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan, Envoy of Irish Republic

Last night the committee of arrangements for the reception to Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan of Roscommon, Ireland, at Associate hall, held a conference and made final arrangements for the public mass meeting tonight. It was felt that it should be postponed on account of the weather, but this is impracticable because Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan's time is limited, and his speaking dates are fixed ahead.

The meeting will be opened promptly at 8 o'clock with musical selections after which the distinguished speaker will be presented to deliver his message from Ireland. He is the vice president of the Sinn Fein organization and as a clergyman he can hold no political office.

The leaders of the Irish movement on this side of the Atlantic would not be surprised to hear of a settlement of the Irish question before Lloyd George sails for this country on Saturday. Rev. Fr. O'Flanagan will tell what will happen if the trouble is not settled and if England allows Ulster to frustrate the aims of the London conference. The meeting is free to the public and all friends of the cause are invited.

TODAY'S DOINGS IN THE DISTRICT COURT

George Burney, of this city, given his freedom from the house of correction at Cambridge last Saturday, was rearrested for drunkenness by Officer Aldrich on Middlesex street early Sunday morning and sent back to that institution for three months by John J. Pickman in district court today. George pleaded not guilty and strongly denied he was under the influence of liquor, although he admitted he had been given two drinks by a friend Saturday night. Officer Aldrich testified that he sent Burney home shortly after midnight Sunday, but that the defendant refused to go and reappeared on Middlesex street at 1.30 o'clock.

When quizzed by Deputy Downey regarding a fine he was given some months ago the accused admitted having only paid half of a $15 assessment, this due, he said, to the fact that he "wasn't given a chance."

"I was rearrested and sent to the house of correction before I had a chance to pay the rest," George said.

Train delay occasioned by the severe storm necessitated a postponement of the larceny cases against David Lyons, Harry Pennington, William Sennett and Joseph Conroy, all of Lowell, and Placid Cormier of Cambridge. The first four are charged with stealing 94 and a half yards of cloth valued at $120 from Fred Mathews, of Somerville, in Billerica Oct. 8.

The police allege Cormier stole 24 and a half yards of cloth valued at $55 from the same person at the same time. The case has been called several times but at the request of counsel for one or the other of the persons involved continuances have each time been asked. Trial is now set for Dec. 7.

A plea of not guilty was entered by counsel representing Charles F. Graham, charged with a statutory offense, but the case was continued to Saturday.

STORM STEMS TIDE OF ARRESTS HERE

The stormy weather is having good effect on drunks, the police believe. Since shortly after midnight Sunday, not a single arrest for drunkenness was made. In fact since that time only one person was taken in custody, and that on a warrant charging a statutory offense.

Now what the officers would like to know is whether the storm is keeping habitual moonshine indulgers from drinking or is it merely preventing their appearance in public?

THE OLD HOME TOWN

TRAGEDY OF THE STORM DEATH OF MRS. MEEHAN

Clarence G. Coburn Dies as Result of Accident Due to Storm

A tragedy of the storm was revealed late yesterday, in the news of the death of Clarence Gilman Coburn, a lifelong resident of Pawtucketville, who passed away at the Lowell Corporation hospital, as the result of a severe nervous shock sustained when he was struck by the falling limb of a tree in Dutton street, near the Merrimack Mfg. Co. He suffered a fractured leg and the shock resulted in his death.

Mr. Coburn was 71 years old, a staunch republican of the old school of politics and served one term in the state legislature, and under the old Lowell city charter was for many years a member of the board of overseers of the poor.

Mr. Coburn purchased a grocery store many years ago and later sold out the business to his son, Joseph B. V. Coburn, with whom he lived at 215 Mammoth road. He was a member of William North lodge, A.F. and A.M. He is survived by his wife, Annie J. Coburn; one son, Joseph B. V. Coburn, one sister, Mrs. Freeman H. Butler of Hyde Park, and two grandchildren.

High mass of requiem was celebrated at St. Jean Baptiste church at 9 o'clock by Rev. J. A. Hoduc, O.M.I. The choir under the direction of Joseph Paradis, who also presided at the organ, rendered the Gregorian chant, the solos being sustained by Mr. Paradis, Dr. J. E. Nolet and F. X. Hamelin. The bearers were Josephat, William, Napoleon and Francis Manseau, Joseph and William Cote. The body was placed in the receiving tomb in St. Joseph's cemetery. Funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker Joseph Albert.

DEATHS

HEALEY—Theodore J. Healey, a former service man, died yesterday at his home, 3 Caroline street, aged 40 years. He is survived by his wife, Mary (Dreelles) Healey. Deceased served in the coast artillery, U.S.A., from December 16, 1913, to November 19, 1917. He was employed as a clerk by the American Railway Express Co. TRAGEDY OF THE STORM DEATH OF MRS. MEEHAN

Wife of Postmaster Passed Away Yesterday Afternoon at St. John's Hospital

The many friends of Mrs. Nellie Veronica (Little) Meehan, beloved wife of Postmaster John F. Meehan, will be pained to learn of her death which occurred at St. John's hospital, yesterday afternoon.

Deceased was well and favorably known throughout the city and, because of her cheerful disposition and genial manner, was genuinely loved and admired by her many friends. She had a sweetness of thought and kindness of expression that attracted people to her and cemented friendships on every hand. She enjoyed the company of her many acquaintances and many a burden was lifted by the sympathy that her eyes as well as her words expressed. However, pneumonia developed about ten days ago and steadily she grew worse until the end came peacefully, shortly before 4.30 p.m., yesterday.

Mrs. Meehan was active in the affairs of St. Patrick's church and a zealous member of the Holy Family sodality of that parish. Before her marriage she was employed for several years as bookkeeper for the C. G. Coburn Co., in Pawtucketville, and, as in the various circles in which she moved, was a general favorite with business men and others with whom she came in contact. She was a typical exemplification of American womanhood, a beautiful wife and a kind and gracious neighbor.

Besides her husband, she leaves her mother, Mrs. Catherine (King) Little; four brothers, Edwin J., manager of the Proctor Cooke Co., Charles, Frederick and Paul, all of Lowell, and two sisters, Mrs. Francis J. Murphy and Mrs. Walter S. Flynn, also of this city.

The body has been removed to the late home of deceased, 37 Arlington street.

W. F. Whitcomb has notified the chamber of commerce that he has secured two good speakers for the occasion, Robert H. Newcomb and Fred A. Hortter, both of Boston. Mr. Newcomb is the executive's assistant of the Boston & Maine, while Mr. Hortter is car accountant.

Mr. Hortter is also the demurrage expert for the B. & M. and will discuss demurrage problems and car service matters. Mr. Newcomb acts as chief publicity agent and will talk on railroad situations in general.

AVOID THE DANGER ZONE

Public Warned to Keep Safe Distance From Fallen or Sagging Wires

(Special to The Sun)

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—A warning to the public, to keep at a safe distance from fallen or sagging wires, was issued yesterday by Col. Alfred F. Foote, state commissioner of public safety.

Not only should actual contact with such wires be avoided, the commissioner points out, but they should not even be approached by those not familiar with their handling. Water and ice are ready conductors of electricity, and if high tension wires have fallen in a pool of water, it is difficult to tell just how far their effects may be felt.

"The western, central and northern portions of the state," Col. Foote says in his statement, "have a large number of high tension lines distributing power from hydro-electric plants to manufacturing centres and local electric companies' transformer stations. Most of these lines carry in excess of 10,000 volts and while they are practically all run over private lands, frequently they run parallel to and across public highways.

"In addition, a large number of cables of mains running on poles in the streets of cities and towns are carrying current from 1,300 to 2,300 volts. As a result of the storm, wires, poles and insulators in many localities, particularly north and west of Boston, are heavily coated with ice and many have collapsed under the strain. Water and ice are ready conductors of electricity. Care should be exercised in the vicinity of a high tension or distributing line in touching or coming in contact with poles, hanging wires or anything that is wet where there is a possibility of its having contact with the line. There is a possibility of trees wooden fences and poles being heavily charged without the breaking of any of the wires, through leakage in the current passing around the insulators.

"It is urged that only those familiar with the danger attending such circumstances and whose business it is to deal with existing conditions be permitted to handle broken or sagging wires or come in contact with articles likely to be heavily charged with electricity." HOYT.

SIDEWALKS AND SNOW

Police Will See to it That Sidewalks Are Made Passable

Aiming to keep sidewalks free of snow and slush having in mind the safety of the general public, Supt. of Police Redmond Welch today stated that he expects storekeepers, business houses, house owners throughout the city to comply with the city regulations which provide that sidewalks shall be cleared within 24 hours after a storm has ceased.

"We don't expect to have people go out and shovel the snow or slush off their sidewalks while a storm is in progress," the chief said, "but soon as the snow or sleet stops falling storekeepers, business firms, superintendents of office buildings, janitors and others, must see to it that their sidewalks are cleaned off and made safe for the public to walk on. The law states that such a precaution be taken no later than 24 hours after the storm's abatement and the police will see to it that this regulation is enforced. It is for the protection of the citizens in general that we ask this ordinance be complied with."

The chief was pleased that many firms in the business district shoveled off the snow and sleet of yesterday and this morning.

LIQUOR OFFICERS MAKE GOOD FIREMEN

Armed with a search warrant for booze and distilling apparatus, Officers Cossette and Kenney of the police liquor squad and Federal Officer Sheldon swooped down on a 24-family tenement house on Elm street late yesterday afternoon in time to check what would probably have been a serious fire.

Today they are making every effort to apprehend a man who, according to the police version, was working at the gas meter in the cellar, having it partially disconnected for the purpose of connecting the gas-piping with a 35 gallon still all set up ready for operation the moment gas was supplied it. Amidst the fumes caused by an explosion of gas when the man broke the pipe connections at the meter the officers lost track of the alleged offender, who, it is thought, escaped through the cellar window.

As the officers opened the door leading to the cellar from the first floor, they were met by a flash of flame and a strong odor of gas fumes. Immediately a call to the fire department was sent and, realizing that gas had caused the fire, the officers shut off the gas from the outside. They warned the family on the first floor who were unaware of the fire in the basement until the officers had opened the cellar door. Examination showed, the police say, that the pipe had been disconnected from the meter and a new piping system arranged, the pipe leading to the still set up in a small compartment in a corner of the cellar. The "plumber" was working by the light of a candle, it is stated, and when he unloosened the pipe without having first shut off the gas, an explosion took place which immediately started a fire. The prompt arrival of the fire apparatus confined the blaze to the basement. The firemen had difficulty in entering the cellar and were forced to don gas masks. The wooden boards against which the meter and gas pipes were laid were burned and a pile of rubbish also caught fire, but the blazes were extinguished before any serious damage could be done.

When the smoke had cleared away the police in a more rigid search of the basement located besides the still three five gallon jugs containing a small amount of moonshine and 50 bottles of Jamaica ginger stored in a small, bricked room, newly whitewashed, where the distillery was evidently to be operated.

It is believed that the timely arrival of the police averted what might have turned out to be a serious catastrophe as the tenement block is thickly inhabited, there being many small children in the 24 homes, the police say.

In the early evening the squad visited a house on Gorham street, where they confiscated a 10-gallon still, a quantity of moonshine and 75 gallons of mash, and another tenement block in Elm street where on one floor they found nine barrels containing a small amount of mash.

DIRSA IS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

John Dirsa and Alexander Santriana, of Lawrence, were held in $1000 bail for the grand jury by Judge J. J. Mahoney in the Lawrence district court yesterday. The two young men, who are said to have become "pals" while serving terms in state prison at Cranston, R. I., are accused of robbing Titus Romanofsky, a Lawrence storekeeper, of $50 while he was entering his home late on the night of October 29. Dirsa, who is a brother-in-law of the plaintiff, came to Lowell and after a search of several days by the local police was arrested on Middlesex street by Officer Maloney five days after the alleged robbery.

HERO OF LOST BATTALION DEAD

Col. Whittlesey Ends Life on Steamer Toloa, While on Way to Havana

Brooding Over Memories of His Experiences in War Ascribed as Cause of Act

NEW YORK, Nov. 29—Secret brooding over the memories of his experience in the great war, from which he emerged one of America's greatest individual heroes, was ascribed today by friends and relatives of Lieut. Col. Charles W. Whittlesey as the cause of his taking his life Sunday while on the way to Havana.

Leaving several letters, presumably explaining his act, the commander of the "Lost Battalion" disappeared from the steamship Toloa, 24 hours out from New York. His intimate friends had no idea he was making an ocean voyage.

Spirit Shaken By Memories

Members of his family and close business associates were incredulous at first when a wireless despatch reported him missing. Then they began to recall incidents which, pieced together, might have been recognized as indications that his spirit was shaken by the recurrent memories of his brothers-in-arms who had died before his eyes in France.

The last blow they said, more trying than the rest, was in Washington a fortnight ago when Col. Whittlesey took part in the funeral services for America's unknown soldier. He returned from the capital more depressed than ever. There he had met hundreds of former friends and had marked anew the gaps in the ranks of the men he loved.

"His Mind Stopped"

"His mind stopped," was the explanation of Robert Forsyth Little, of the law firm of White & Case with which Col. Whittlesey had been associated for about a year.

"It had all it could bear, remarkable mind though it was."

"For the last two years there has scarcely been an hour when the grief and horror of the war was not brought vividly and specifically before him."

Col. Whittlesey had told no one, apparently, that he was going to Havana. When he left his office Friday afternoon, it was with some cheery remark regarding the Army-Navy football game, which he indicated he intended to see.

At his boarding house on East 44th street, he told friends he was going away "to be by myself—to rest," when he left Saturday morning with a traveling bag.

Leaped Into Fame

Col. Whittlesey's name leaped into prominence over night through his retort to the German officer who called upon him to surrender after he was surrounded in the Argonne.

For four days and nights his command, the First Battalion, 308th infantry, 77th division, had lain under fire, cut off from aid, without food or fresh water. All but 87 men had been killed or wounded.

Blindfolded and under the protection of a white flag, a German soldier stumbled into the American strong point.

"Surrender," he cried, "in the name of humanity," and he told how from the German trenches, the agonized cries of the American wounded could be heard. But his message to the enemy was not that he would lay down his arms.

Told Germans Where to Go

"You go to hell," he said.

A few hours later, American reserves attacked all along the line, the Germans were pushed back, and the little band of survivors saved.

On his return to the United States he was voted the Congressional Medal of Honor, the most coveted American decoration for heroism, and a few months after the armistice, the German officer who called on him to surrender, made a public statement, extolling the courage and dogged determination of his former foe.

MORATORIUM FOR GERMANY PREPARED

LONDON, Nov. 29. (By the Associated Press)—Rumors of a proposed moratorium for Germany are revived by the Daily Mail, which reported that Sir John Bradbury, British delegate on the reparations commission has drafted a memorandum on the subject for the consideration of the cabinet.

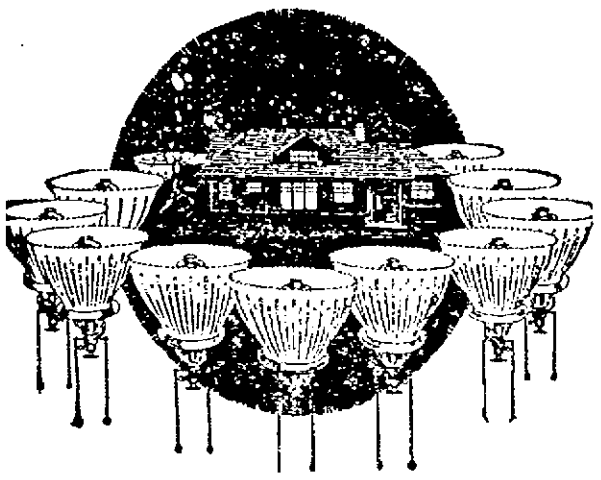

The newspaper says that as a result, the cabinet may urge a moratorium on Germany's debts to the allies of two or three years, on condition that she cease manufacturing currency.

Dr. Walter Rathenau, former German minister of reconstruction, and Dr. Walter Simons, former foreign minister, arrived in London today and it is surmised that their visit is connected with the reparations question. Baron Edgar d'Arbernon, British ambassador to Germany, is also here.

WAR ON BIG WORDS

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Professor Walter Ripman of the University of London has declared war against "high-sounding" words. "Pram" should be used for perambulator and "step-lift" for escalator, he says. He approves many slang words.
